School design may be pitched as a model school

By JON BISHOP

WILMINGTON—The Wilmington High School Building Committee met last Thursday to discuss the current status of the project in addition to hearing new updates on the budget and the materials the architect plans to use.

The project manager from Joslin, Lesser and Associates, Bill Cuniff, said, "We're in pretty good shape right now."

Per MSBA regulations, Wilmington had to submit a sixty percent construction document to the Commonwealth. In the document they had to do estimates, which were to be compared with those done by the MSBA. Those involved must seek independent esti-

WILMINGTON - Women of Wilmington (WOW) has recently been fundraising and working on projects for back to school to help the families of Wilmington.

Jomarie O'Mahony, one of the founding members of WOW, put the organization together with the idea of giving women in the community a way to become involved with community service in 2010. WOW started with 30 to 40 women helping at the local food pantry. The organization has since grown quickly and now includes husbands and children making overall 327 members who have worked to start a sponsor-a-child program, a sponsor-a-

West Nile virus detected in Wilmington

Protect your family with these tips

By CHRISTINE KENNEY
Crier Correspondent

WILMINGTON - Although summer is coming to an end, it is the time of year residents should be most wary of mosquitoes. The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (DPH) has reported mosquitoes collected from the Dublin Avenue wetland area on Aug. 7 were discovered to be carrying West Nile virus, which, according to the DPH website, can cause illness ranging from a mild fever to encephalitis and meningitis—the latter two appearing in less than 1 percent of those infected. The specific type of mosquito tested in Wilmington was a Culiseta melanura, which primarily bites bird but will occasionally bite mammals, including humans.

Shelly Newhouse, Wilmington's Director of Public Health, said that reportedly only one person in the Middlesex County has shown signs of contracting the virus this year, but she has received calls from concerned residents. She warns

WILMINGTON - Local resident Rachel Saloman spent five weeks this summer in Africa supporting the Bright Futures Orphanage in the village of Asitey, Ghana. Saloman was on the first team that International Volunteer HQ (IVHQ) sent into this particular orphanage. As such, they found more than the usual challenges.

IVHQ was formed in 2007 by Daniel Radcliffe who was disenchanted with his own travel experience and wanted a better support system. Based out of New Zealand, the oversight

Ledges at Woburn - Redesigned system holds less volume

ZBA, drainage expert worry about flooding

By PATRICK BLAIS

WOBURN - A drainage expert still has doubts as to whether the proposed Ledges at Woburn housing development will include adequate runoff containment systems to prevent flooding in the neighborhood.

During last night's Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) meeting in City Hall, Karen Staffier, a project manager for engineering firm Vanasse, Hangen & Brustlin (VHB), argued that she hasn't received adequate data to verify the applicant's claims about its drainage system.

In particular, Staffier remains concerned that stormwater being discharged across the street onto private property — particularly at 1047 Main St. — will continue to be released at rates and volumes that contribute to serious flooding in the area during any significant weather event.

"At this time, we don't feel that the issue of downhill flooding has been put to bed," said Staffier. "We reviewed all the stormwater information and there was a new study that did look at the downhill flooding. Where we stand now is we don't feel all the technical backup has been fully provided to us."

Presidential Way's The Dolben Company is under agreement to purchase the rights to the 168-unit housing development at 1042 Main St., which the city was forced to grant a comprehensive permit for in 2006 to local developer Anthony Santullo.

However, the firm wants to alter the layout of the site, creating four to five buildings instead of putting all of the housing into one giant six-story building with underground parking. The nine-acre property overlooks Main Street in North Woburn near the Wilmington line.

Besides controversy over the amount of blasting and earthwork to be completed — the developer has estimated that as much as 418,000 cubic yards of material will need to be crushed and moved — neighbors have repeatedly contended that the elevated site already contributes significantly to regular flooding.

In response to further inquiries by ZBA member Margaret Pinkham, the VHB consultant revealed that The Dolben Company redesigned its drainage system to hold a lower volume of runoff than called for in original plans.

In particular, the old proposal included retention tanks that would have been about five feet deep, but now they're two feet deep.

That redesign was made after VHB challenged whether the bigger system could actually release that much water into the surrounding soils without saturating the ground and causing flooding on other properties.

According to Carlton Quinn, one of the developer's consultants from Allen & Major Associates, engineers originally wanted to create a system that would address all runoff issues from the site.

However, due to the amount of technical data that would be required to prove the adequacy of that system, the petitioner instead decided to create a less expensive drainage design that still meets all state requirements.

"The additional information requested by VHB was a large area to analyze. It would have taken us a couple of months to complete," Quinn explained.

Quinn, explaining that the runoff would be discharged into the state's drainage system underneath Route 38, readily admitted that flooding will continue in the area.

Currently, the state's system, which eventually discharges into a pipe on private property at 1047 Main St., is not sufficient to stop flooding following any weather event larger than a two-year storm event.

But based upon state regulations, which only require developers to capture and discharge enough stormwater to keep flooding situations from worsening over current conditions, the developer is meeting its burden, he insisted.

"I'm very comfortable that we can come to an agreement that we're not increasing downstream flooding," said Quinn.

ZBA Chairman Edward Robertson later challenged the drainage expert to explain how The Dolben Company could legally discharge water onto private property without getting some type of permission from that landowner.

"I know you're not a lawyer, but wouldn't you need permission to drain onto their property? Isn't that common sense? Generally, you can't create a nuisance on someone else's property," Robertson said.

Wakefield attorney Theodore Regnante, representing the petitioner, retorted that his client is technically not discharging water onto neighboring property.

Specifically, Regnante claimed that stormwater from 1042 Main St. will go into the state's system, which subsequently flows onto the land across the street.

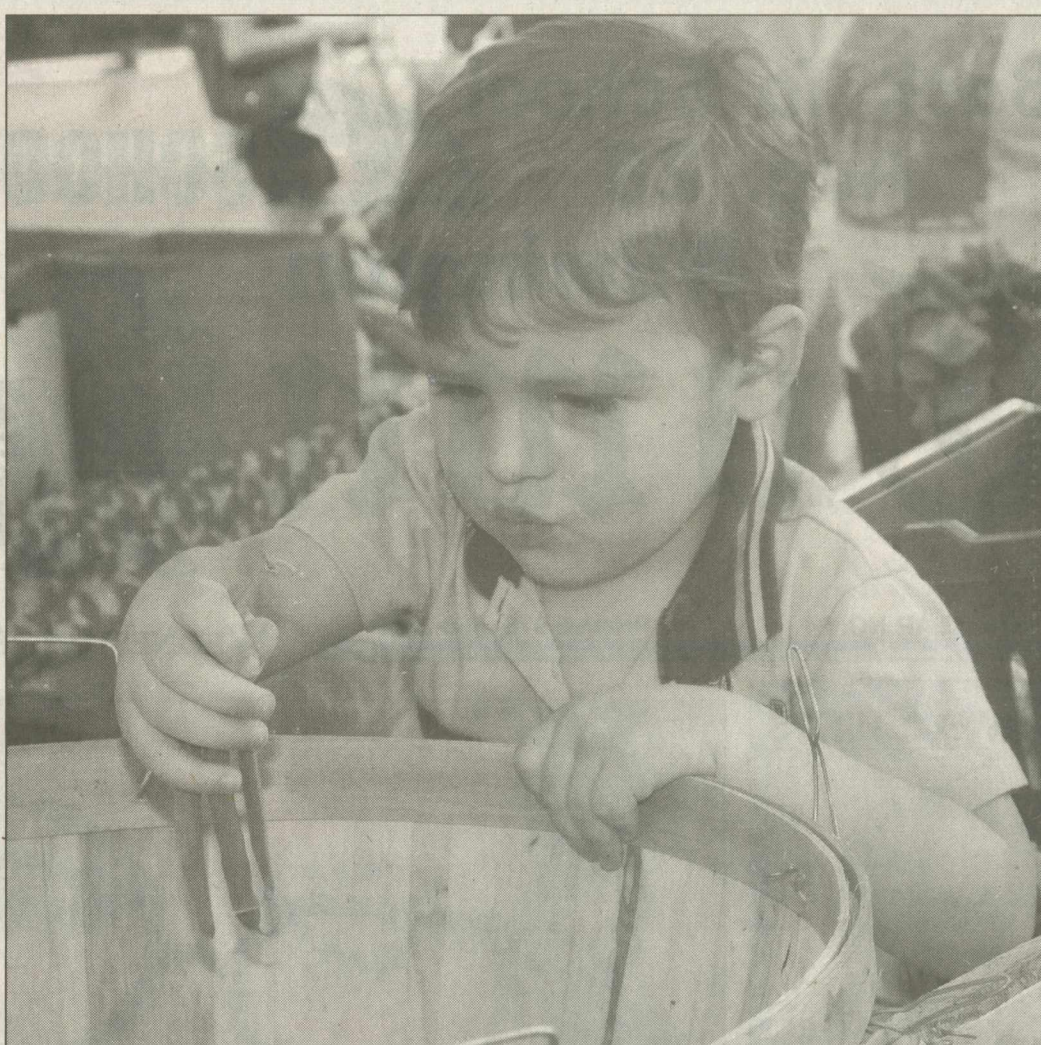

The expert on Chapter 40B or affordable housing law further argued that the state has the right to do so, as it has been doing so for nearly a century.

"I'm not here to defend the state. The Commonwealth can defend [itself]," said Regnante.

"Is there a court judgment prescribing those rights?" Robertson countered.

"That's the way we're answering the question. It's not up to this board to make a determination on legal rights to property," Regnante shot back.

VHB is expected to receive the requested information on the new drainage system in time for the ZBA's next meeting on the housing project.

1 Jewel Drive on auction block

By JON BISHOP
Crier Correspondent

WILMINGTON -- 1 Jewel Drive is up for auction on Thursday, August 30.

It is valued at $8,098,500, and it is currently owned by Vinco Properties, which is a real estate development company based in Boston. According to its website, Vinco specifically "targets the acquisition of undervalued real estate assets and undeveloped land."

Vinco "generates value through the repositioning of existing buildings, land entitlement, development opportunities, and quality construction."

According to Town Assessor Skip Moynihan, it is up-to-date on its taxes. Moynihan said that the site had been taken over by NAI Hunneman, another Boston-based Realtor.

Moynihan confirmed that he had heard the site was up for auction.

Hunneman was founded in 1929 by Carleton Hunneman, who was a Harvard Graduate. According to its website, it "offers a full range of real estate brokerage, leasing, investment sales and management services throughout New England, as well as 340 other markets across the nation and around the world."

Today, Hunneman "has developed specialties in the medical device and life science fields to complement its strength in traditional industrial, office, and research and development real estate. NAI Hunneman is a Boston market leader in real estate investment sales."

The Crier contacted Hunneman, but representatives could not confirm if they had indeed taken over 1 Jewel Drive.

The property was built in 1976 and is comprised of 14.25 acres. It is listed as a warehouse with 426+/- parking spaces, 412' frontage on Rte 38 & 1,230' frontage on Jewel Dr. The buildings are approx 47% tenanted according to auction information. According to its assessment and sales report, the property was last involved in a transaction back in 2006.

1 Jewel Drive most notably houses Gym Street USA, which is a well-known gymnastics facility.

organization supports volunteering programs in developing countries all over the world. They place over 4000 people each year. Jobs range from teaching to medical work to construction. Saloman attends Ohio State University (OSU) and learned of the IVHQ project there. Sixteen students made the trip.

In Saloman's case, jobs involved a little of everything as they assessed the situation and developed a routine. Describing a typical day, she talks of tutoring reading and math, assisting with hygiene practices, arranging play time, and accompanying children to medical clinics. "We walked one and half miles with them to school," she explains. Then there was building cabinets, painting, cleaning and supplying water and other essentials. Her long days began at 5:15 a.m. and ended at dinner-time.

There were 40 children at the orphanage ranging in ages from 4 years to 14 years old. The OSU group started each day by carrying water for themselves and the children to bathe and get ready for the day. Neither their temporary home nor the orphanage had running water. Before the group arrived, the children did not even have mattresses, instead sleeping on the floor. The IVHQ group had raised funds for such needs and was able to buy some.

The volunteers also had to purchase or develop many of the teaching and support materials they used. Flash cards and games were used to teach math skills. Since English is the national language of Ghana, they did not have extra challenges there, and their work teaching English was supplemental to other schooling and experience. Saloman was able to learn some basic phrases of the Krobo dialect spoken in Asitey.

Saloman also learned to cook local dishes. The volunteers stayed in a home with a Ghanaian woman and her three daughters. At first, their hosts did all the cooking, but as everyone became more comfortable with this new situation, the US students learned and helped with meals.

As is often the case, the volunteer feels as if she received much from the experience. She was most impressed by the children's attitude. It was a learning experience "just to watch kids who have hardly anything be so happy and excited about life." Saloman explains how much they appreciated every thing the group did, even little things. She saw first hand the lesson "do not to take anything for granted."

Ghana is a Sub-Saharan African nation located in western Africa on the coast. It is near the equator and has a warm climate. The population is estimated 25 million with 52 different ethnic groups in the country, not uncommon for African nations. Also not uncommon, they struggle with issues surrounding water supplies. The country achieved independence from the British in 1957.

Here in Wilmington, Saloman's fund raising was supported by the Wilmington United Methodist church. The church is continuing their involvement by helping Saloman with her December project. The college student plans to collect backpacks and school supplies to send to Bright Futures. Anyone interested in helping can contact Saloman at saloman.1@osu.edu.

"If you want to do something, make it happen," IVHQ founder Radcliffe said in a recent interview. He was only 22 when started developing IVHQ. "Hard work and self belief will get you a long way."

Apparently Saloman is following Radcliffe's words of advice.

It's Your Money IRS AND IDENTITY THEFT

The IRS has put identity theft at the top of the tax scams it faces. Together with the Justice Department and local U.S. attorneys, the Service is cracking down on suspected identity thieves.

Most often, a tax identity thief uses a stolen Social Security number to file a forged tax return in order to claim a fraudulent tax refund. Most victims would not know their social Security number had been stolen until they got a letter from the IRS announcing that town returns had been filed under the same Social Security number for the same year. Or you may be told that you received wages from an employer you never worked for or that other issues may have surfaced.

If you get a letter from the IRS that suggests some identity theft has occurred, respond immediately to the agent named. If you notice suspicious identity theft activities on your own, call the IRS to protect your tax account.

Letters to the editor

Miceli clarifies details of day care bill

Dear Editor,

My opponent has posted/sent to the editor a letter criticizing me for voting for the "Governor's Bill H3986." Lesson #1, Doug, when the letter H is attached to the number, it's a House bill, not a Governor's bill.

According to Mr. Sears "this will make it harder for working mothers and fathers in Wilmington and Tewksbury to find day care slots" - Not true.

This act applies only to a provider working out of a private home and accepting state vouchers.

Wilmington has 20 family child care providers located in private homes, and only two accept state vouchers.

Tewksbury has 37 family child care providers located in private homes and only four accept state vouchers.

This act does not apply to large facilities such as the Wonder Years and Knowledge Beginnings. They are exempt.

The act also exempts center-based providers and exclusive privately paid providers.

This act creates the legal mechanism for those home-based providers accepting state vouchers to unionize. To form a union, a vote must be taken by the child care providers.

I have presented the facts regarding this House bill.

Rep. Jim Miceli

Why 'local' matters

by Jon Bishop

National print media—newspapers and magazines—is dying. But we shouldn't be surprised.

It has been slowly fading into the abyss for years.

Let's be honest: the only place you'll find objective and responsible journalism is local print. Such newspapers will promote the community and keep the public informed.

They aren't interested in slamming people—nay, they will make sure that everyone receives honest, fair coverage.

It's sad that the same can't be said for national news.

Take, for instance, The New York Times: it long ago abandoned serious coverage of its home city in favor of national news.

It needed to sell papers and make money.

Thus, it editorializes. Its articles are sloppy, lazy. The public hasn't viewed The Times as America's paper of record in ages.

They see it as a joke.

And so it is with other venues.

Newsweek has resorted to politically-charged covers and stories. It only runs hit pieces.

The examples continue.

It's why sales have fallen. Sure, the rise of Internet media has played a part, but that is not the whole story.

It's this: discerning readers recognize a bad product when they see one.

But that state of modern news has also led to another problem: much of the public now assumes that articles must always contain the reporter's thoughts on the issue.

I'll cite an example: I recently went out to dinner with my aunt, whom I had not seen in some time. She mentioned to a friend of hers that I had begun a career as a journalist. She told him: "My nephew enjoys objectively presenting stories. He wants readers to form their own opinion."

I was incredulous, but I didn't say anything. I would have assumed that people would recognize that this one of the pillars of the profession—and it is a serious one. That the public has forgotten the meaning of journalistic ethics is dangerous.

An aside: many wonder what has happened to civic education in America. The fourth estate, too, must play a part. And it hasn't.

Now I don't think much can be done to save the major papers. For them, it is dusk, and the blackness of night quickly approaches.

He was right. And it is good that things are not different.

I can't imagine what local papers would be like if readers saw such headlines as: "Local Selectman Visits Ice Cream Store: Silent Encouragement for Poor Health?"

It would be absurd. People would lose faith in all forms of media, which would be troubling, disconcerting, disturbing—any negative word, frankly, applies.

Let's take a look into the future.

We can write the national venues off. The Internet—strong sites like Politico and others—has essentially picked up the slack.

But local newspapers must be supported; they must be read. They, unlike the bigger, national papers, have survived—and this is because they offer something good.

Readers, as mentioned, recognize this.

But there is another reason—people want to be connected with their town.

Local newspapers are often the bulwark of the local community. They are a way for people to talk, learn. Residents can find out about events. They can educate themselves on various issues of policy and practice—which could, in the future, lead to a run for office.

If local news becomes infected with the same virus that has so plagued its national cousin, then we can expect for the entirety of the country—every nook and cranny—to be consumed with apathy. Citizens will be completely separated from the public square. All things will be plagued with the malaise that slowly devours the rest of the nation.

And this is a condition from which we might not be able to recover.

Let the national media continue on its current path. The Times and others, honestly, can fade away.

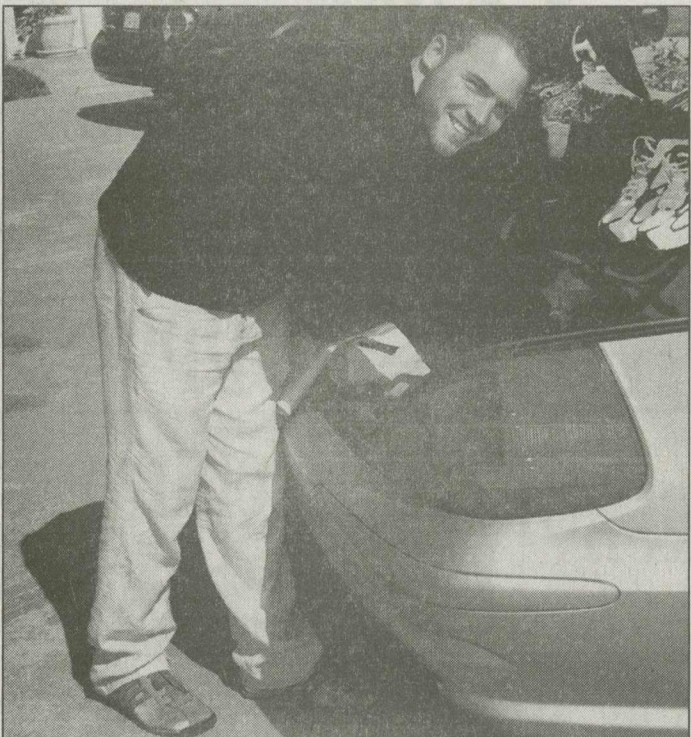

Local venues, however, cannot.

People should remember to read them. Because a world without the local newspaper will first lead to one based upon conjecture and rumor—which will then lead to nothing. The ties that bind the political realm will fray and break—and this will sink us all.

And that scenario is terrifying.

Letting go when your child leaves for college

By LEE MANCHESTER

Wagner College News Service

In the next few weeks, many American families will undergo a challenging rite of passage: sending a student off to college for the first time.

The biggest part of this challenge, two Wagner College administrators say, is letting go.

"Most children have cell phones at an early age, so parents are able to keep tabs on them," says Sara Klein, dean of campus life at Wagner College. "Not being in constant contact can be traumatic for parents when their children first leave for college."

Difficult as it is for parents to let go of their "babies," it's an important part of the process of growing up—for everyone concerned.

So, how can families facing this impending rite of passage prepare for the severing—or, at least, the stretching—of the technological umbilical cord?

"I think it's important to have a conversation before the student leaves home to discuss what the expectations are around communication," Klein says.

Ruta Shah-Gordon, Wagner's assistant vice president for campus life, suggests that students and parents make arrangements to have one phone call a week, at a specific time on a specific day, when they will talk over what's come up during the week.

"You can call at other times, just to say hi, but there's this one time each week when the student can talk about not doing that well on a test, and being upset, and the parents can be there for them—and the students know they're going to have that opportunity," Shah-Gordon suggests. "And it works well for parents, too. They don't feel like they have to be constantly checking up on their student, because they know that once a week they'll have a conversation and cover the necessary bases."

Letting go isn't easy—but talking in advance about expectations, and making plans to stay in touch without hovering like helicopters over one's student, can make things a little easier for everyone concerned.

Lee Manchester is the media relations director for Wagner College, a U.S. News & World Report Top 25 regional university located on Staten Island in New York City.

Campaign 2012

Fionda releases agenda

By JOHN WHITE

BURLINGTON - In seeking the Democratic nomination for state representative through a write-in campaign, Burlington resident David Fionda said his focus is on letting the voters make the decision.

Fionda, a former Town Meeting representative, and Virginia Mooney, a Burlington Town Meeting member and former selectwoman, have announced their intention to conduct write-in campaigns on the Democratic side for the Sept. 6 primary. They are competing in the 21st Middlesex District, comprised of Burlington, Bedford, and Precinct 3 in Wilmington.

In a unique set of circumstances, state Rep. Charles Murphy filed papers to seek re-election, but subsequently announced his resignation from the House. (Murphy has since decided to complete his term).

Murphy's decision came after the deadline to withdraw, so his name remains on the ballot. Though not a candidate for re-election, Murphy is the only name on any ballot in the primary.

Fionda said his strategy is two-fold - inform voters in the district Murphy is not a candidate and will not accept the nomination - and, secondly, to get his own name out to the public.

"Voter education is the biggest thing we've done," he stated.

If Murphy gains the most votes, he could withdraw and then a panel comprised of members of the town Democratic committees in the district would select the nominee.

"What I'm focused on is letting the voters decide," stated Fionda.

He said he made the decision to run immediately after hearing that Murphy would not be seeking re-election.

Fionda said he sees state representative as another step in community involvement. A certified public accountant, who describes himself as "an entrepreneur," Fionda cited his background in youth sports, local government, and in the Rotary Club, where as district governor he worked with 43 different clubs.

More recently, Fionda has been active in opposing the Ledges housing proposal in Woburn (near the Burlington line), an effort he said has gotten him more involved in politics.

"I was energized by the ability to help people," he commented.

While acknowledging the "twists and turns" of this unusual primary contest, Fionda said, "I made a decision on Day 1 to run a traditional, active campaign."

That involves knocking on doors, holding signs, and making a lot of phone calls. Fionda said he is making an extra effort to get name out to the voters in Bedford and Wilmington.

"We've really had to work very, very hard," he stated.

AGENDA

Fionda said his top priority as a legislator would be "putting people first."

As for specific issues, Fionda he wants to promote "smart growth" which balances economic development with quality of life for residents.

Fionda said he favors tax and financial relief for seniors and is concerned about providing affordable health care for all citizens.

Other issues noted by Fionda are support for public schools and improving services for veterans.

"This is about helping people," he stated.

Fionda said his background gives him insight into small business and added he believes the state needs to do more to help those businesses. The importance of access to financing is vital, noted Fionda.

He said he wants to improve "fiscal accountability" while maintaining services

OUTLOOK

Fionda said he is enthused about receiving an endorsement from Murphy, stating the incumbent "has done a lot great things for this district."

He said is "still very excited" about the campaign and will continue to work hard until the day of the primary. "I'm cautiously optimistic," commented Fionda.

In order to gain the nomination, a write-in candidate must gain the most votes and the total needs to be at least 150.

Burlington Selectman Walter Zenkin is running a write-in campaign in the Republican primary.

New candidate jumps into race for Murphy's seat

By JOHN WHITE

BURLINGTON - A third person is in the race for the Democratic nomination for state representative in the 21st Middlesex District as Ken Gordon of Bedford announced Monday he is a write-in candidate.

Gordon, 52, joins Burlington residents David Fionda, a former Town Meeting member, and Virginia Mooney, a Town Meeting member and former selectwoman, as write-in hopefuls for the Sept. 6 primary. The 21st District consists of Burlington, Bedford, and Precinct 3 in Wilmington.

The only name which appears on any primary ballot is that of incumbent state Rep. Charles Murphy, a Burlington Democrat. After filing papers to seek re-election, Murphy announced his resignation from the House.

Murphy's decision came after the deadline to withdraw so his name remains on the ballot.

Originally, Murphy stated he would resign as of July 31, but later decided to complete his term. Murphy is not a candidate for re-election and has stated he will not accept the nomination.

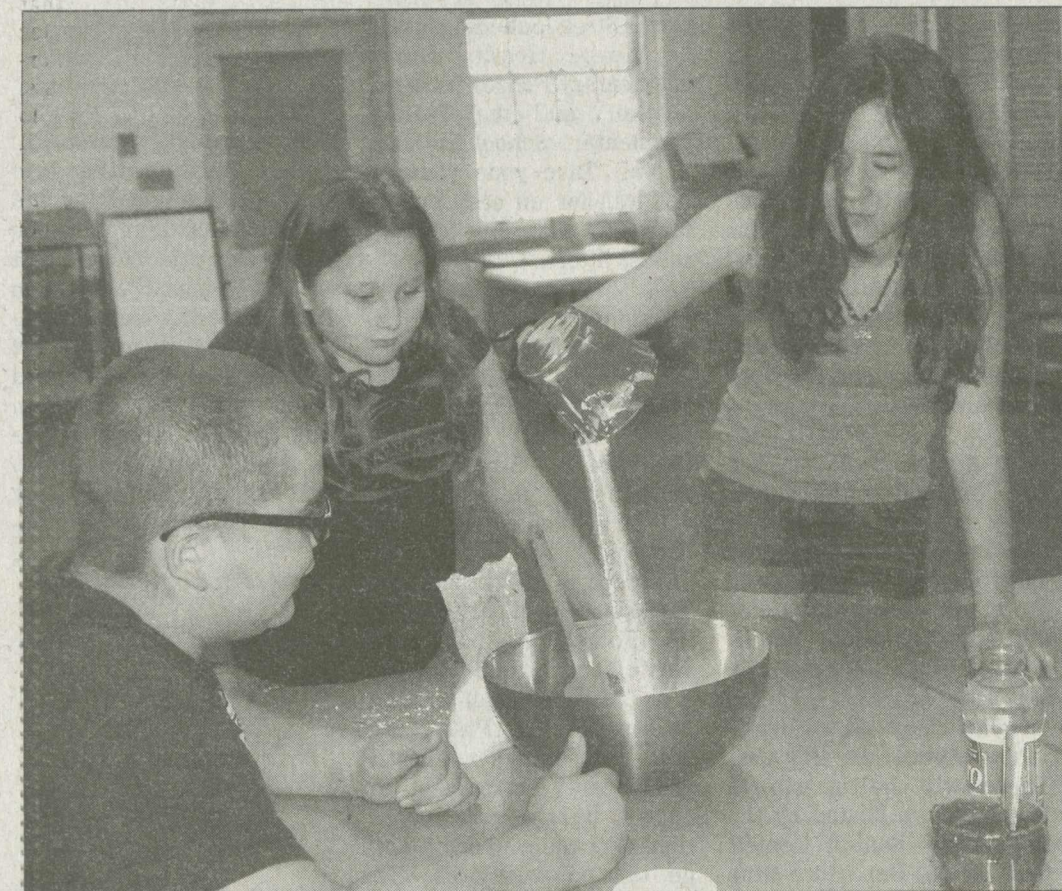

Gordon is an attorney who specializes in workplace discrimination cases.

He currently serves as vice chairman of the Bedford Zoning Board of Appeals and is chairman of the Cultural Council in that community. Gordon also cites his community involvement in youth sports.

In announcing his candidacy, Gordon stated he wants to be an advocate for the middle class and address such issues as affordable health care, threats to the environment, and keeping jobs in the community. He said there is also a need to make sure employees are treated fairly.

To gain the nomination, a write-in candidate must gain the most votes and the total must be at least 150. If Murphy gets the most votes, he can withdraw, and a panel representing town Democratic committees in the district would select the nominee.

On the Republican side, Burlington Selectman Walter Zenkin is running a write-in campaign.

Let's Hear it!!

Your Two Cents...

Salem Street dangers

I have to agree with the writer two weeks ago about the trucks that continue making a force up and down Salem Street. I have been a resident on Salem Street for 22 years and, boy, has it changed. We have a couple of safety issues we should be concerned about with these box and 18-wheeler trucks using Salem Street as an access road. The road is too narrow to support these trucks, especially if they pass together at the same time.

The second is the fact that we have two sets of railroad tracks crossing Salem Street which, one has been having problems with the gates not working properly, it would not be a good recipe for residents if an oil tanker and train happened to meet.

Those are just a couple of concerns, and more in the Rolodex. I also agree with the writer about the Krochmal Farm trucks. They start at around 5 a.m. and continue all day. One last note, it would be a great idea if our town reps sent memos to the surrounding businesses such as Benevento Stone and Heffron letting them know that Salem Street is not an access road and that no trucks are allowed north bound. It would be even better if we could get Tewksbury on board during the mall/I-93 access road negotiations.

Town Crier Film Series

ParaNorman Activity

By CATHERINE FRANCIS
Town Crier Intern

One kid. One town. And one zombie apocalypse? Yes, that's right- ParaNorman offers the right mix for a great summer movie. As I walked out of the theater, I was struck with awe, and spent the next twenty minutes talking about how awesome ParaNorman is. This film is about a young boy named Norman. In the beginning, everyone (except for his friend, Neil) believes that Norman is a "freak" and although he can speak with the dead, no one thinks that he is telling the truth. That is until sunset where the dead comes to life and suddenly Norman is the one person in this town who must understand these creatures.

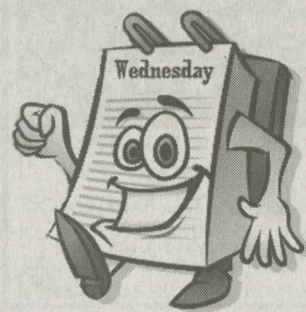

There are twenty-four frames in every second. Every frame has a photograph that consists of, in this case, a stop motion masterpiece. And who makes those beautiful works of art? The cinematographers do. Cinematography is the art or techniques of motion-picture photography. For example, the cinematographer holds the camera and chooses how far from the subject to stand. The King's Speech, Hugo, and many others have won an academy award for cinematography. ParaNorman should. Throughout the film, many different angles that the camera makes are incredible. In the beginning of the ParaNorman, Norman is walking through the cemetery. Then, it cuts from the front view to a bird's eye view, making the audience feel scared for the boy. It's the cinematography that makes this film.

Another person who can "make" or "break" a film is the editor. In one scene, for example, Norman is riding his bicycle. Cut to Alvin dancing. Cut to Norman. Cut to Alvin. They do this over and over until Norman hits Alvin onto the ground and a good comic relief is placed at the end. If it were not for the editor's skill, the audience would not get a good laugh.

As previously stated, I, a twenty-two year old, loved this movie. However, there are numerous moments throughout the movie that may scare a child. When Norman is trapped in the forest in the beginning of the film, there are eerie sounds coming from the trees, the ground, and the villagers. As the movie moves forward, I look around at the six-year-olds around me. One was crying, one was screaming, and another was watching the movie through peeking eyes. Although at the end they were just as excited as I was, their journey was terrifying. Parents should be aware of this, and perhaps warn their children, before seeing the film.

Catherine Francis graduated from TMHS in 2009. She is a senior at Rochester Institute of Technology majoring in Film and Animation.

PARENTING

Back to school tips to get your kids to read more

(StatePoint) The start of a new school year is a great time to emphasize the importance of reading at home. Solid readers perform better in school and in the workplace, have a healthy self-image, and become life-long learners.

Research shows a whopping 45 percent of children ages 3 to 5 are not read to daily, and this lack of literacy can take a negative toll on school performance. Luckily, there are many things parents can do to make kids passionate readers.

"Reading stimulates children's imagination and expands their understanding of the world," says actress Kate Beckinsale, who is teaming with "The Nestlé Share the Joy of Reading Program" to raise awareness about the importance of children's literacy and support the work of Reading Is Fundamental (RIF), the largest children's literacy nonprofit in the United States.

If you're looking to make reading a bigger part of your children's lives this school year, here are some great tips to get them motivated:

- Start young. Reading aloud to children at an early age is the most effective way to help them attain critical language and communication skills and instill great habits.

- Take advantage of free online tools and resources that help make reading an engaging, shared experience for parents and kids. For example, RIF's "Leading to Reading" website contains activities for children ages birth to 5. Visit www.rif.org/kids/leading-to-reading for more information.

- Variety is the spice of life! Be sure your house contains plenty of books to choose from on a variety of topics.

- Launch a children's book club with other parents. Take turns hosting your children's friends for snacks and a lively discussion on the book of the month.

- Kids love getting mail! Subscribe to children's magazines so they'll have something fun and beneficial to look forward to each month.

- Make sure children have their very own library cards and become frequent patrons at your local library.

- Be it the morning paper or your favorite novel, set a great example by making reading a daily habit for yourself.

- Many literacy programs supporting underserved communities are currently experiencing federal funding cutbacks, but everyone deserves a chance to read. Invest in the lives of other children who might not have the same opportunities as your kids. For example, right now, every time you enter a promotion code found inside specially marked packages of Nestlé and Wonka candy at www.CelebrationCorner.com

/RIF, Nestlé will donate money to RIF, to fund purchasing books for kids.

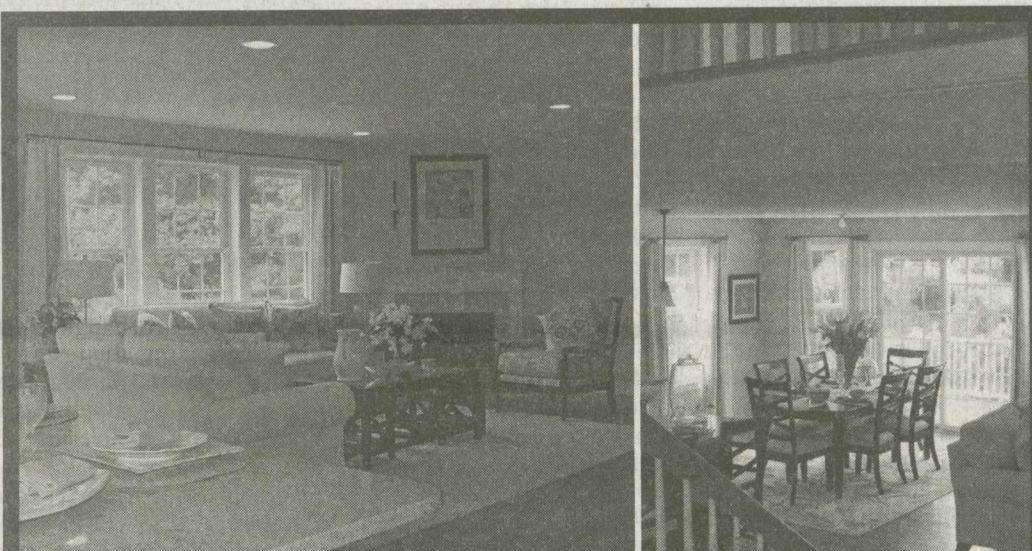

Almost a quarter of public school fourth graders score below even the most basic levels on reading exams, according to National Assessment of Educational Progress. Don't let your children fall behind. Take steps this school year to help your children and others to hone this basic tool for success.

Harmeling Physical Therapy

Local firm to offer free evaluations

By JON BISHOP
Crier Correspondent

WILMINGTON—Harmeling Physical Therapy, which has been in business for twenty-three years, will offer free Sunday evaluations to interested patrons, beginning September 9.

This, according to physical therapist James O'Brien, is to "embed ourselves in the community."

"Wilmington has been one of the newer offices," he said. "We kind of do this as a way to give back to Wilmington."

Originally, the service was offered to athletes. Students, he said, might not be familiar with the injury evaluation process. So, they wanted to help out.

But, word spread, and, as O'Brien noted, "now the doors are open for everybody."

The free service will last until November 11. Right now, the company is in the "marketing phase."

Evaluations are brief; they only last about ten to fifteen minutes.

Harmeling also has relationships with some of the area orthopedic doctors. They'll refer patients to them if further treatment or evaluation is necessary.

"Basically, we're here to give people opinions," he said. They generally see all kinds of injuries.

"There's a good mix," he said. But, at this time of the year, ankle and knee injuries are more frequent.

"In the fall seasons, there aren't that many throwing sports, you know? It's basically running-type stuff," he said.

All kinds of athletes visit Harmeling, he said, identifying cross-country track, volleyball, soccer, and track and field as some sports that stand out.

He reiterated, though, that it is all over the spectrum.

"You just don't know what you're going to get. You know?" he said.

O'Brien called Wilmington and the surrounding communities "highly competitive."

"You have a lot of great schools and athletic departments in here," he said.

One aspect of serving Wilmington he enjoys is making people better. It's why he became a physical therapist. The job can positively affect lives.

"Just the gratification that you can make a difference in someone's life," he said. "You do get a lot out of that."

"I think that's the best part of my job—just seeing people get better," he later added.

Patients are often highly appreciative of Harmeling's services, he said. Their offices are adorned with thank-you cards and notes.

O'Brien said that there are two therapists in the Wilmington office, one assistant, as well as three to four aides.

Often, therapists will rotate evaluations, he said. He noted that, in addition to this offer, Harmeling will be examining people at the upcoming Wilmington Road Race September 23 sponsored by the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce.

Harmeling Physical Therapy has other locations in Danvers, Wenham, and Gloucester. Company-wide, there are over thirty employees.

Interested clients can visit harmelingpt.com.

Flaherty Twins show hard work pays off

By MELISSA HANSON
Crier Correspondent

WILMINGTON - Lance and Kevin Flaherty of Wilmington are two college students who epitomize success. Both high achievers count multiple impressive accomplishments in school and athletics as they begin their junior years of college.

Lance attends Clarkson University in Potsdam, New York, where he majors in Mechanical and Aeronautical Engineering. He hopes to work for the military defense industry designing materials after earning his degree. During the last academic year Lance was inducted to the Aeronautical Honor Society, Sigma Gamma Tau. This honor society is nationwide for college students within the Aeronautical Engineering major. Members are required to have a GPA of 3.5 and have to be in their sophomore year. During the induction ceremony, Lance was elected secretary of the chapter by his peers.

"I was completely surprised," said Lance on his election as secretary. Lance believes his peers elected him because they know he is a hard worker who can handle the position. He has maintained a 4.0 GPA and stayed on the University's President's List through all four of his semesters at Clarkson. Lance has also had an internship at Raytheon.

Kevin attends Colby-Sawyer College in New Hampshire and studies athletic training. At the end of his sophomore year he was chosen to be the captain of the school soccer team. Kevin has been on the team since his freshman year, and was impressed that he was chosen as a captain over some of the upperclassmen.

"It was an honor being selected," says Kevin. He believes he was chosen as captain for his leadership on and off the field, as well as the way he was involved with the team through their last season. Kevin says his involvement with the soccer team not only helps the athletic nature of his major, but helps to keep him organized and keep a balance between his time as a student and an athlete. He has maintained a 3.0 through college and has had internships with athletic training of the Colby-Sawyer women's lacrosse team. Kevin is also involved with the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division III and the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC).

Both brothers say their parents are their biggest influences to stay successful.

"If I don't work hard stuff just isn't going to come easy to me," said Lance who also credits a fourth grade math and science teacher, Mr. Madeira, as an influence for teaching him about engineering. Lance believes a lot of his success comes from his true interest in his major.

"You need to be a hard-working individual," says Kevin who says one of his biggest motivators is getting his degree. He attributes some of his success to his dedication to sports and his involvement with his all-conference team.

Old Ironsides sets sail

By Larz F. Neilson

On Sunday, Old Ironsides set sail under her own power for just the second time in 131 years. In honor of that momentous event, we offer a local history story with a Town Crier angle.

Can you imagine going to school on a ship, with a curriculum including navigation, mathematics, lifeboat and ship handling? And your class project was working on a new set of sails for "Old Ironsides," the world's oldest commissioned warship.

That is what Larz Neilson did in the spring of 1928. He left Wilmington High School in his senior year. He was not quite 17 when he began a two-year program at Mass. Nautical School. Classes were held in the Charlestown Navy Yard aboard the Nantucket, a square-rigged, steel-hulled bark.

In the fall, the cadets would build a shed over the main deck, which would serve as their classroom during the winter. Once spring arrived, the shed would be down and the Nantucket would go out for a training cruise.

The USS Constitution was a close neighbor of the Nantucket in the Charlestown Navy Yard. The old ship was in drydock, and was in sad shape. There was no security at all for the old ship. One night, some cadets went aboard her, and Larz left his sailor's hat on one of the cross-ties, high up on a mast.

One keep-sake he had from his time aboard the Nantucket was a sailmaker's palm, a leather band that had a firm "eye" in the palm, for pushing a large needle through the sail canvas.

An excellent account of a cadet's life aboard the Nantucket appears in the book, "Ambushed Under the Southern Cross," by Capt. George Duffy. Duffy was in the last class to sail aboard the Nantucket at Mass. Nautical School in 1940. Because of World War II coming on, cruise stayed close to the U.S. coastline. Neilson's two cruises, in 1929 and 1930, were to the North Sea and then to the Mediterranean.

The Nantucket had a steam engine, but usually travelled under sail. There was limited space for coal storage, and it had to be hand loaded, with cadets shoveling the coal into large canvas bags which would then be carried by two cadets.

Capt. Neilson had a long career at sea, working for the American-Hawaiian Steamship Co. During World War II, he was captain of Liberty Ships and Victory Ships. His final voyage was in 1947.

He then returned home to Wilmington where he embarked on a newspaper career, eventually founding the Town Crier in 1955.

Capt. Duffy was fourth mate on the SS American Leader when it was sunk in the South Atlantic by a German ship in Sept. 1942.

Capt. George Duffy

The Germans turned him over to the Japanese, who held him as a prisoner of war in Southeast Asia for more than three years. The Germans and the Japanese considered him military, but the U.S. government considered him to be a civilian, as he was in the merchant marine, (not an organization, not military) working for a private company. He finally gained recognition as a veteran in 1988, after spending 43 years fighting for veteran's status.

Mass. Nautical School is now the Mass. Maritime Academy, located at Buzzard's Bay, Massachusetts.

Foundation helps families experiencing loss of a child

By DANA BURNHAM
Crier Correspondent

BILLERICA - Readers of the Town Crier may remember Christine Piretti-Boudreau. In 2004, the Crier helped bring attention to the fact that items were being taken from her infant daughter's grave.

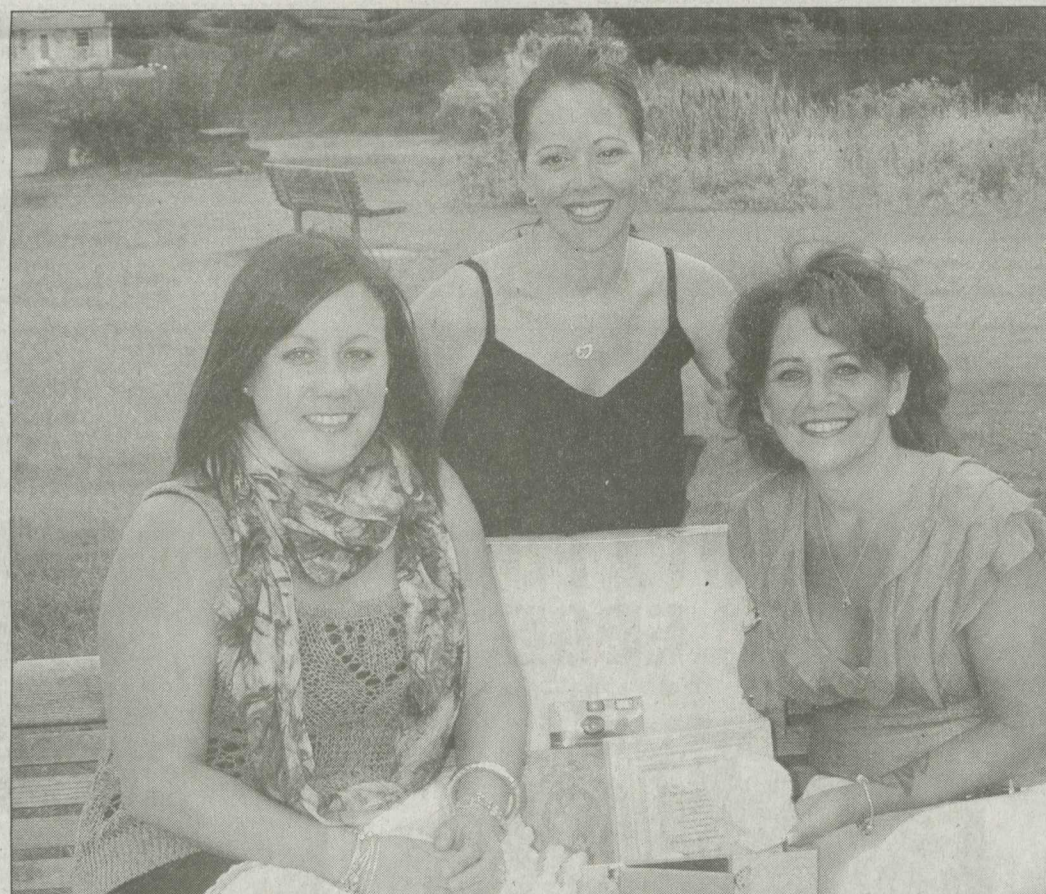

Christine, a resident of Tewksbury who grew up in Wilmington, explains that since her daughter's passing, she joined a support group (The HOPE Group) to help her deal with the loss, and as a result became close to two other mothers - Jeana DeBenedetto Caterino, of Billerica, and Julie O'Callaghan-Richardson, of Burlington, who had also lost young children.

For years, they tried to imagine how they could, in Christine's words, "give back to other families that had babies go to heaven to soon."

Recently, they founded the A.C.D.K. HOPE Foundation to bring awareness to others, to help other families that go through such heartache, and to keep alive the memories of their babies. The four initials that make up the name of the foundation are from the first names of the babies they memorialize: Dakota Catherine, daughter of Christine; Anthony John, "A.J.", son of Jeana DeBenedetto Caterino; and Chase David and Kenley Blake, Julie O'Callaghan-Richardson's twins. (The initials are in alphabetical order.)

Christine, Jeana and Julie feel that their "angels brought them together, and in their memory The A.C.D.K. HOPE Foundation was created."

Christine says, "Everything we do is for our children, and The A.C.D.K. HOPE Foundation is dedicated in their honor. When a child dies, it is very difficult to find the "silver lining", because it's not a natural process and children are supposed to outlive their parents. We thank our children for many reasons in their short time on this earth. A.J., Chase, Dakota and Kenley touched the lives of so many and taught us more than many people strive to learn in a lifetime. The A.C.D.K. HOPE Foundation is part of their legacy. We move forward in their honor, and because of them we're able to help countless families in their journey of grief."

The HOPE Group - where the three founders met - is a baby loss forum for bereaved parents. It was founded over 30 years ago by Rindy Huebner and provides peer support for parents who have suffered the loss of a child through miscarriage, stillbirth, or neonatal death. HOPE (Helping Other Parents Endure) provides meaningful and caring methods of dealing with the crisis of the death of a child and has helped countless families in their grieving process. The mission of the A.C.D.K. Hope Foundation is to:

- give back to The HOPE Group to help alleviate expenses related to newsletters, reading materials as well as memorial service expenses.

- help families in alleviating the financial hardship associated with the final expenses of their child(ren). Given the high cost of burial and funeral expenses and the unexpected nature of infant death, a portion of all donations will be set aside for this purpose.

- designate a portion of the proceeds to fund the creation of A.C.D.K. Hope Foundation Memory Boxes for local hospitals. Memory boxes are commonly provided to parents after the loss of a baby. The A.C.D.K. Hope Foundation Memory Boxes will contain disposable cameras, a photo album/frame, knit hat/blanket, poems and literature, and seeds to plant in memory of the lost child.

To help fund these worthy aims, the Foundation will be holding their second annual event on Saturday, October 13, 2012 at the Billerica Lodge of Elks, 14 Webb Brook Road in Billerica. Plans are in place for raffle prizes, auction items, 50/50 raffle, and entertainment. All are welcome and encouraged to attend.

Christine reports that their first annual event in 2011 was a huge success. "We had an incredible outpouring of support and were overwhelmed by the number of generous donations we received. Our raffle table was FULL of wonderful prizes, there was amazing food, dancing and karaoke, 50/50 raffles and lots of love and laughter filled the room. We're certain this year will be bigger and better than last!"

You can also check out the organization on Facebook under 'The A.C.D.K. Hope Foundation.'

Girls Softball ends season with a tourney win

The Tewksbury Girls Softball U16 Travel Team ended the 2012 travel Season just as it started, with a convincing tournament win. The Redmen won the 23rd Annual TGSF End of the Year tournament this past weekend in Tewksbury.

Tewksbury won the tournament despite dropping their first game in a heartbreaking loss to Methuen on Friday night. They followed up that loss by going on a six game roll through the rest of the tournament.

Saturday morning the Redmen beat the New Hampshire Mystics 10-1 and followed that up with a win over the Westford Waves by a score of 7-3 in extra innings and a rout of the MetroWest Diamond Dawgs by a score 8-0 to become the number three seed heading into Sunday.

The Tewksbury girls went into the final day of the tournament on Sunday as they have all year long, with their backs against the wall. But they would beat The Mass Pride 8-0 and follow that up with a 14-0 win over the Silver Lake Strikers before entering the championship game against The Northeast Storm who had a perfect record of 5-0 and had given up only run in those five games to that point.

The Redmen were not intimidated, however. The teams battled in a back and forth game before Tewksbury took the lead in the top of the seventh inning before setting the Storm down in order for the first time of the game to claim the championship by a score of 6-5.

The U16 girls ended the 2012 season with four tournament championship wins out of the seven tournaments they participated in, including their second Massachusetts state championship in July and an overall record of 37-6, while out scoring their opponents 349-111.

Frozen yogurt fever grips town with Orange Leaf opening

By JON BISHOP
Crier Correspondent

TEWKSBURY—Frozen yogurt continues to soar in popularity. Restaurants at which it is served are expanding throughout the Merrimack Valley and specifically, Tewksbury.

One such company is Orange Leaf. The quickly growing, Oklahoma-based chain frozen yoghurt restaurant was founded in 2008. It now has 184 stores under its name, with 92 more planned to open on the way.

Out of those, seventeen are locations are destined for Massachusetts.

Its website says that the company is "one of the most demanded brands in the industry." It credits this to "the superior taste and texture of our product and our family-oriented, visually uplifting environment. These combined characteristics create a fun and enriching destination to be enjoyed by friends and family alike."

Franchise owners enjoy Orange Leaf because of their "intense commitment to being the most pro-franchisee company in the industry. We provide outstanding support that our franchisees need to succeed at a fraction of the cost of our competition."

The Tewksbury location opened last weekend and it attracted a large crowd.

"We had lines pretty much the whole day," said Don Coffin, who is one of the owners.

"We'd like to thank all of those people who came in and visited us," he said.

The opening, he said, was well-attended on Saturday and Sunday.

It even attracted elected officials.

"We had Finegold and Miceli in here, and we got recognition from them on Friday night," he said.

Thus, the weekend was a success.

"Yeah, everything went well. Business is good," he said.

Coffin and Ken Mackey, who is another owner, are Tewksbury residents. The third, Gerry Goodwin, is from Andover.

The local feel was important, he said.

"That's a big plus," he said.

The employees, too, are from the area, which was important to owners.

Coffin said they have been making sure their customers are pleased with the store. And, again, this is where the importance of the local ownership comes in.

He said that residents have seen him around town and complemented him on the store.

Even the landlord, who Coffin said was normally a 'Dairy Queen person,' enjoyed the yogurt.

"I guess if the landlord likes it, we're all set, right?" he said.

Orange Leaf is located at 345 Main Street, which is in Wamesit Place. They were attracted to this area for multiple reasons.

"The location was good because it has good visibility of the street," he said.

It also has "great access" to Lowell, Dracut, Chelmsford, and Andover due to its proximity to the town line and I-495.

Wamesit Place was long ago identified as part of the Route 38 corridor development project. Coffin said he hopes to see more stores join him in the plaza.

Orange Leaf is not the only frozen yogurt restaurant to open in the region. Another, Fro Yo to Go, recently opened in Wilmington and longtime Tewksbury favorite eatery The Pushcart Café also brought in a frozen yogurt bar earlier this summer.

Democratic candidates debate

By JOHN WHITE

BURLINGTON - The three write-in candidates for the Democratic nomination for state representative were at the Jeanne Garrett Senior Center to discuss several issues in a forum presented by the Council on Aging.

David Fionda, Ken Gordon, and Virginia Mooney have declared they are write-in candidates in the 21st Middlesex District in the Sept. 6 primary. The district consists of Burlington, Bedford, and Precinct 3 in Wilmington.

The only name on any primary ballot for state representative in the district is incumbent Charles Murphy.

Murphy announced his resignation after the deadline to withdraw. He has subsequently stated he will finish his term, but Murphy is not a candidate for re-election.

The three candidates made opening statements and responded to questions at the sparsely attended event.

Opening

In his initial remarks, Fionda, a Burlington resident, said, "It is time for Beacon Hill to put people first."

He noted that he has served in Town Meeting and on town government committees. Fionda also mentioned his experience as a district governor for the Rotary Club.

His candidacy has been endorsed by Murphy and state Rep. James Miceli, D-Wilmington.

Fionda is a certified public accountant and describes himself as entrepreneur.

Gordon, who resides in Bedford, is the vice chairman of Zoning Board of Appeals in that town and also chairman of the local Cultural Council.

"I'm a proud and involved Democrat," he stated. "We stick up for the rights of people who have been marginalized."

Gordon is an attorney, specializing in workplace discrimination cases.

He said he would like to address the issue of services for seniors and also the need for more affordable housing.

Mooney, who has resided in Burlington for 53 years, commented on her community involvement, including 36 years in Town Meeting and a term on the Board of Selectmen.

She said more needs to be done to address the needs of average citizens.

Mooney said power is concentrated among too few people in the Legislature and believes she can represent the average citizen.

"I think I can do a good job as your state representative," she stated.

Q and A

Asked about the use of welfare cards for items other than necessities and benefits for illegal immigrants, all three candidates said the cards should be used for reasons intended. As for immigration, all agreed immigrants should work within the system, but said that is a federal issue.

On the subject of commercial development, Fionda said communities need to make "smart investments in smart projects."

He said there is a need for "balance" in building the tax base yet protecting residents.

Fionda said traffic issues such as Middlesex Turnpike and the Route 3-Route 128 interchange need to be addressed.

Gordon noted his work on the appeals board and stated, "We're very concerned about growth in Bedford."

He said growth needs to be "controlled" in order to deal with traffic and other issues which affect residents.

Gordon stated there needs to be balance between promoting growth and jobs and the quality of life in a community.

Mooney said she favors a moratorium on new growth in Burlington.

"I've been sick over the whole thing," she commented. "They should stop growing in Burlington right now."

Mooney said she particularly wants to see "slow growth" in the Middlesex Turnpike area.

The candidates were asked about regulations for senior drivers.

Mooney said there should be regular checks on those in their mid-80s.

"People should be stopped who can't drive," she said.

Gordon said older drivers should not be treated any differently than anyone else.

"It's discrimination against seniors," he stated. "Age should not be a factor."

Fionda said he would like to see more testing for all drivers.

"I don't want to wait for an accident to do something," he said.

On the question of whether the candidates would work full-time in the Legislature, Fionda responded that he is working 16 hours a day campaigning.

"This is my full-time job and will continue to be my full-time job," he stated.

Mooney stated, "I'm retired and I'll be a full-time representative for Burlington, Bedford, and Wilmington."

Gordon said he will continue to work as attorney, but adjust his hours to meet his legislative responsibilities.

"I will efficiently get this done," he said.

In order to gain the nomination, a write-in candidate must get the most votes and the total must be at least 150.

Burlington Selectman Walter Zenkin is a write-in candidate on the Republican side.

New Business in South Tewksbury

Smooth Hair Grand Opening

BY SHARON ADELMAN
CROWLEY
Crier Correspondent

TEWKSBURY - This week Smooth Hair Studio celebrates its Grand Opening in Tewksbury, offering raffles, door prizes, refreshments, and 25% off for all new clients.

Owner Stephanie Dukette brings more than a decade of salon industry experience into the community as a hair consultant and stylist. Services range from classic cuts to formal styling for special events, and clients can have exclusive use of the salon for birthday parties, Girls' Night Out, or bridal parties. A recent bride herself, Dukette knows just how important the "The Big Day" is, offering a salon package by the same name.

"I'm all about making people feel comfortable," Dukette says. By keeping up with current products and trends, she instills trust in her clientele. And if you've ever wondered what it's like to experiment with your hair, Dukette has done it all. "Clients tell me every time they come in that my hair is different." She's been bleach blonde, had long extensions, dip-dyed the ends of her hair, and even color-blocked sections with every color in the rainbow. "Being a hair stylist, I like to see first-hand how the products work. We're staring in the mirror all day anyway - it's fun to see the results." Clients enjoy the results too, and sometimes even experiment themselves.

The 31-year-old Blaine school graduate was personally asked by the school's director to join the staff as an instructor, and for the past five years Dukette has taught basic through advanced classes. "I've worked with all kinds of students, including people who have never held scissors before."

Dukette says she is big on education, and will encourage her staff to attend classes four times a year, in addition to hair shows and off-site education.

Her sincere, easy-going manner appeals to students and clients because she's easy to communicate with and a great listener too. In fact, it's obvious in the creation of Smooth Hair Studio that Dukette paid close attention to what her clients wanted in a new salon.

Accessibility: in addition to her regular salon hours Dukette offers extended hours, by appointment, for the client who may need last-minute styling for a big event, or color correction from a hair dye job gone wrong. For added convenience, she will be offering online booking, as well as appointment confirmations and sales receipts via text.

Affordable services: Dukette researched salons throughout Tewksbury for competitive pricing. For the budget-conscious, Smooth Hair Studio offers a-la carte services. For example, a client can choose whether or not to have a blow-dry. "We don't lump services together," she says. The studio offers 10% off when a client schedules three hair services on the same day, and 25% off to new clients - even after the grand opening.

Location, location, location: Dukette chose 2144 Main Street in Tewksbury to better serve clients commuting on Rt. 38. Smooth Hair is minutes from Rt. 93. "And of course the giant flag in front of Jim Boudreau's Auto Repair is a great landmark," she adds.

Clients will feel right at home in the salon's warm ambience. "Wine and chocolate" as Dukette describes it. Rich shades of chocolate brown and deep burgundy pair nicely with the charcoal wood grain floor throughout the salon. A hair washing station with sparkling fixtures sit on a raised platform, where clients can appreciate a view of the salon; a refreshing change from those salons with shampoo stations hidden in the back. And while you sip on your coffee, tea, or water you can listen to a rolling mix of music from Pandora via Dukette's Droid Tablet. She'll even play Country music if you like. She's all about your comfort.

Smooth Hair is located at 2144 Main Street in Tewksbury. Phone: 978-657-6070

GRAND OPENING: Friday, August 24th from 6-8 pm and Saturday, August 25, from 4-6pm.

See website for store hours and event details:

Watch for information on some new September trips...possibly the Bourne Scallop Festival and the new outlet stores in Merrimack, N.H.

Also, we again caution residents, especially our Senior Citizens, against fraudulent and scam phone calls. Most recently several people have received calls about winning a million dollars and/or a Mercedes but that they had to send money. Please just hang up on calls like this and call the Police Department to inform them.

Be careful...be cautious. God Bless America.

Wilmington Through Art Contest Part of 2012 Community Fair

WILMINGTON - The Wilmington Memorial Library is sponsoring a "Wilmington Through Art" contest as part of the 2012 Community Fair. High school students and adults may enter; professional and non-professionals are encouraged to participate. Entries must be original hand produced art work and must represent Wilmington: Town Common, Silver Lake, historic sites, etc. Art work may be drawn or painted (oils, pastels, water color, acrylic, charcoal, etc.). First place winner receives $100, second place $75, and third $50. There is no entry fee, art work and entry form must be submitted to the library on September 15. Full details are on the entry form, which may be found by going to the library's web site home page or else may be picked up at the library. The art work will be displayed at the library the week before the Fair.

This year the Fair will be held Saturday, September 22, 10am-1pm on the Swain Green (site of old Swain School). There will be thirty non-profits on hand to explain their services and volunteer opportunities. In addition, many organizations will have gift baskets to raffle. Select vendors from the Farmer's Market will be selling their wares. A henna artist, a roving magician, face painting, and story times for children will provide the entertainment. A shredding truck will again be part of this year's fair, so be sure to clean out your files and bring them to be shredded on site. During fair hours, residents may stop by the library and share their stories of Wilmington as part of the library's oral history project. In the afternoon, residents will have the opportunity to learn how to access the Town Crier online.

West Nile virus found in town

that the virus is most prominent in late summer, but it will likely be detected during future summer seasons as well.

"Residents are concerned about how to avoid the disease. Mosquitoes are always going to be there. West Nile virus is going to become a seasonal epidemic that the whole country will deal with every summer," Newhouse said.

However, there are steps you can take to avoid mosquito bites. Newhouse recommends residents take the following preventative measures:

- Be aware of peak mosquito hours. The hours from dusk to dawn are peak biting times for many mosquitoes. Consider rescheduling outdoor activities that occur during evening or early morning. If you are outdoors at any time and notice mosquitoes around you, take steps to avoid being bitten by moving indoors, covering up, and/or wearing repellent.

- Clothing can help reduce mosquito bites. Although it may be difficult to do when it's hot, wearing light colored long-sleeves, long pants and socks when outdoors will help keep mosquitoes away from your skin.

- Those who find themselves outside at dusk and other times of high mosquito activity should continue to protect themselves from bites by wearing long pants and long sleeved shirts, and using a mosquito repellent with DEET; always follow the label on the repellent.

- Limit areas around your home for mosquitoes to breed by either draining or getting rid of items that hold stagnant water. Check rain gutters and drains. Empty any unused flowerpots, wading pools, and children's toys and change water in bird-baths frequently.

- Install or repair screens. Some mosquitoes like to come indoors. Keep them outside by making sure you have tightly-fitted screens on all of your windows and doors.

While the virus has been detected in Wilmington mosquitoes, Newhouse said, other than continuous town-wide spraying through the Central Massachusetts Mosquito Control program, the Board of Health will not make recommendations to change town routines based on the DPH findings.

"The Board of Health is not recommending any curfew for sports or limiting recreational activities during dawn or dusk," Newhouse said.

The risks of contracting the virus are reduced by vigilantly taking precautions. However, people over the age of 50 should take special care as they are more susceptible to contract severe infections from the virus.

The virus was detected in Wilmington mosquitoes in 2005 as well, Newhouse said. For more information about West Nile virus and how to prevent it, visit <http://www.mass.gov/dph/wnv>.

W.O.W. helps families go back to school

family-at-Christmastime program, and a clothing pantry.

With the school year approaching, WOW saw an opportunity to help the members of the Wilmington community who may not be able to provide every school supply their child needs.

"It's a great opportunity to help with the necessities... [parents] won't have to cut corners," says O'Mahony. The organization has been putting together backpacks filled with school supplies for over 50 children. The backpacks hold regular school items like notebooks, binders, and calculators. The members of WOW have also put together care packages for the nurse's office and the front office. The items include hygiene kits aimed for the boys and saltines for the nurse to have on hand. WOW also gives a "recognition award" to a teacher who goes above and beyond their duties. The winner is peer nominated and will receive an iPad, and will be awarded on the first day of school.

"Kids won't have to be worried they'll be the only one in class without the 'calculator' everyone needed," said Jomarie. The food pantry and Cumberland Farms were heavily involved in helping with the school supplies for the backpacks. Some of WOW's other funding comes from a previous road race and corporate funding from wintertime.

Aside from women, there were children present to put the backpacks together to be received by some of their peers for this fundraiser.

"Even if we can't help, we'll find help," said Jomarie. She knows that schoolteachers try to keep the school supply list to a minimum, but that many families have a hard time affording every item on the list. WOW also plans to help the school obtain supplies as needed through the school year.

"We definitely get positive feedback," said Jomarie, who has proof by the growing size of WOW within just the past year.

High School construction start date uncertain

mates at each stage of the project.

Everything, according to Cuniff, came in on target. Construction firms PM&C submitted an estimate at $67,896,088 and Gilbane's was $67,768,580, representing a less than 0.2 percent variance that one official characterized as "fantastic."

The building design, which was called "timeless and contemporary" during the presentation on materials, will be "green." It will also have durable flooring and pithy quotations on the small group clusters, which are used to promote learning and lend character.

Blue and white patterns will be featured throughout the building.

Teachers will have "planning wings" and the school will focus on small, collaborative learning. There will be Fibonacci sequencing and patterns throughout the school, in an effort to offer students a sense of discovery.

Jon Richardson, of Dore &

Whittier Architects, told the Crier that the school was custom-designed for Wilmington. Thus, it is not part of the model school program. But, that could change.

"We hope that, when it's all said and done, it will be a model school," he said.

The building could then be used as a flagship for other districts, particularly those with a desire to promote "twenty-first century learning."

Architects designed the building for this specific purpose.

Spaces, explained Richardson, are set up for modern educational practices, with flexibility to accommodate methodologies not even invented yet. Technology, too, will be integrated throughout the building. Eventually, they hope to see a one to one device to student ratio, which will be discussed at Wednesday's School Committee meeting.

The school will offer Wi-Fi access and students are expected to make videos and graphics.

The design also maximizes multi-disciplinary learning, for instance effectively accommodating science teachers who wish to work with those in history.

But, before all of this can become reality, litigation between the town and the appellants who oppose the high school must come to an end. The next petitioners' statement is due August 28. A summary decision will be released on September 17.

Should the matter not be dismissed entirely, an adjudicatory hearing is scheduled for October 25.

Before any construction can begin, the gymnasium at the current high school must be torn down and the utility coordinator must be built.

"Obviously, we want to get as much work in as soon as possible," said Mike Marcella, who is a project manager.

Because of the appeals, the date on which work will begin is still a "moving target."

Susan Mann and Patti Murray, both Secretaries for the Wilmington Middle School were busy filling teachers mailboxes for the first day of school next Tuesday.

August 1, 2012

Kathleen Burnham

Dear Members of the Wilmington School Community,

Can it really be the beginning of August? Where did this summer go? It's hard to believe but it's that time of the year again - the preparing for a new school year. Welcome back! Before we know it, your child(ren) will be boarding a yellow school bus, filled with enthusiasm, personal hopes, fears, aspirations and dreams. Please be assured that we are ready to receive all 3653 of them.

On behalf of the Wilmington Public Schools, I would like to welcome your children to our schools for the 2012-2013 school year. This summer the administration, faculty and staff have worked hard to clean the facilities, refine our curriculum and instructional practices, and enhance our resources to support all students. The Wilmington Public School district is proud of its many accomplishments and is committed to providing students the highest level of instruction within a deep and rigorous academic program.

Developing strong relationships with our families is a priority that ensures the success of our students. I believe that communication is a vital part of this school to home partnership. It is my belief that children receive the best education when you and our dedicated teachers work as a team. It is your enthusiasm, support and involvement that inspires children to do their best; and a teacher's ability to teach what they need to learn. Together we can achieve wonderful things.

There's a lot of excitement ahead of us, including new teachers, new friends, new skills to master, and the building of a new high school. Yes, it will be built! It may take a little longer but I am convinced that our students will have the state of the art building that they deserve. I look forward to sharing in these exciting times. For students in grades 1-12, school begins on Tuesday, August 28th. School hours are posted on our website and bus routes will be posted in the paper the week before school. We will welcome our kindergarten students on Tuesday, September 4, 2012.

Once again, we will utilize our website as the major means of communication as well as our automated message system, Alert Now. Please do not hesitate to get in touch with me. There is a link entitled "Ask the Superintendent?" on our website. I encourage you to use this link if you have a question or need assistance.

In closing, all of us in the schools are anticipating a terrific school year. On behalf of the staff, I say thank you to the community for supporting our schools. Personally I am looking forward to this school year ~ both for its opportunities and its challenges. This is a wonderful District in which to work ~ it has outstanding students, highly qualified and dedicated staff members, and a supportive and generous community. I continue to feel privileged to be your Superintendent.

With all best wishes for a happy, productive year....

Sincerely,

Joanne Benton
Superintendent of Schools

Get outside

Billerica Rotary Club 5K

BILLERICA - Here's another opportunity to get outside, enjoy the last vestiges of summer weather, and get fit in the process. The Billerica Rotary Club last week announced its 5K race slated for September 16, beginning at 9 a.m. at the Marshall Middle School in Billerica.

Proceeds from the race will benefit the Veteran's Mobile Care Centers. The first 500 registrants will receive a race-day t-shirt. The event will also be chip-timed, so runners looking to skim time off their personal bests will have official results to prove it. ## Fun ways to give kids a leg up for the School Year (StatePoint) Children will soon be headed back to school and it's important to prepare them for the year ahead. As the educational landscape grows increasingly competitive, even the smartest students need an edge.

With today's hectic lifestyles, however, it can be difficult for parents and kids to find the time for enrichment.

"Turning your regular activities into a learning experience can go a long way towards getting kids ready to go back to school," says Kim Tredick, a 5th grade teacher in Santa Clarita, CA, and the 2006 Milken Award Winner. "Just be careful to make the learning fun and not too much like school-work."

Here are some cool ways to clear those cobwebs in preparation for a new school year:

Making the Most of Downtime

Be sure time away from school includes a good dose of intellectual enrichment. Museums, nature centers and historical sites should be a staple of your leisure time and weekends.

Take advantage of time in the car or downtime in general. Whether you're waiting for dinner to be ready, or you're on a lengthy road trip, use learning tools like Brain Quest, a question and answer game to make the time both fun and educational. Because the materials are curriculum-based, the decks and workbooks will give kids a direct leg up on next year's curriculum.

pers, magazines and movie schedules. Then test their understanding by summarizing what they read. Let them read aloud to you, siblings, neighbors and grandparents every day.

Children can practice writing and help you at the same time by composing grocery lists, to-do lists and car directions. Encourage them to keep journals and correspond with relatives -- both with handwritten letters and emails. Help improve their writing by editing together, paying attention to capitalization, punctuation and spelling.

Everyday Math

Math is everywhere, so use it to your advantage. Cooking together from a recipe is a fun and practical way to learn about measurements, timing, and following directions.

When you're out shopping, ask your kids to mentally add the total at the grocery store. This will be a lesson both in how money works and basic arithmetic. Work a percentages lesson into your day by having them calculate the sales tax at the register, or calculate the tip at restaurants.

School may not be in full swing yet, but savvy parents can help jumpstart their kids' minds well before their first assignments.

"Kids don't necessarily want to think about being in the classroom when they are away from school, but educational games such as Brain Quest, can actually make prepping for the school year fun," says Tredick. "Let the kids quiz you while cooking or driving as they'll learn as much from asking the questions and it doesn't feel like homework."

More information and free downloadable activities can be found at www.BrainQuest.com.

Reading and Writing

Give your children a variety of materials to read, like cookbooks, chapter books, nutritional panels, newspa-

Back to school bus safety tips for parents and kids

(StatePoint) A new school year means new routines. And if your child is one of the millions of kids who ride the school bus, you should be encouraged by U.S. Department of Transportation statistics that cite it as the safest mode of transportation for children to get to and from school.

Nevertheless, riding the school bus safely does require children to be aware and follow specific safety procedures. That's why the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) and Chuggington, the educational animated children's television program, have partnered to offer parents and children important school bus safety tips as part of the 'Think Safe, Ride Safe, Be Safe!' traffic safety campaign. The national traffic safety campaign helps parents teach their children about NHTSA's recommended pedestrian, school bus, bike and car seat safety guidelines.

Below are a few school bus safety tips from the 'Think Safe, Ride Safe, Be Safe!' campaign for you to share with your children to make riding the school bus a safer experience:

• Be especially careful around the "danger zone," which is 10 feet in front, behind and on each side of the school bus. To avoid this area, wait for the bus at least five giant steps away from the road.

• Wait to board the school bus until the school bus driver says it's safe to do so. Kids should board one at a time and use the handrails to go up and down the stairs.

• Once on the school bus, go straight to your seat and remain sitting, facing the front of the school bus.

• Look out for cars before getting off the school bus.

Once off, take five giant steps away from the school bus.

Traffic safety education should be a positive, shared family experience. Parents can go online with children and take the pledge to 'Be Safe!' together at www.chuggington.com/safety. In addition to the pledge (to date, more than 500,000 children have taken the pledge to 'Be Safe!'), families can access a safety game, activities, downloadable tip sheets and even a free traffic safety app.

By following the rules, both parents and children can help make getting to and from school each day safer for everyone.

New technology gives students an edge as they head back to school

(ARA) - As the summer comes to an end and students begin preparing for the new school year, tech gadgets are one of the must-have items on any shopping list.

For students running from class-to-class, high tech tools fit easily into a backpack or tote and make everything from class activities to homework easier to manage. Where their parents' generation relied on paper notebooks and folders, today's students need to keep pace with technological developments in the real world - and the classroom.

Ultrabooks, one of the newest options for students who want to tackle schoolwork in style, come in a variety of colors and several ultra-thin, ultra-sleek designs. The devices also offer five hours or more of battery life, allowing students to be untethered from a plug for extended periods without having to fight for spots next to an outlet at the library. With the addition of Intel Smart Connect Technology, students will always be in the know on the latest news from their study groups, friends or family as emails and social networks are kept up-to-date by periodically syncing with information stored on the Web.

So whether finalizing a paper, digging into research, connecting to social networks or staying in touch with friends and family back home, it's important that students are equipped with the technology to get it all accomplished. With the variety of Ultrabook systems available today, there is something out there for everyone. A few choices to consider are:

* Dell XPS 14

Staying connected with loved ones easy, using the Dell XPS 14 and Skype4 video conferencing. This Ultrabook device is one of the first laptops to be certified by Skype and offers pre-installed Skype software. Coupled with the Dell XPS 14's HD Webcam, this Ultrabook device will help first-time college students fight off homesickness and keep families close, no matter how far away they live.

* HP ENVY 4

No more panicking about power cords left behind at home - the HP Envy 4 is incredibly compact and boasts up to eight hours of battery life. This device is perfect for heavy-duty study sessions at the library, especially when all the desks near outlets are full.

* Samsung Series 5

When taking a much needed study break, this computer offers students the ultimate entertainment experience. Students can watch movies, check out photos, listen to music or play games with lightning speed. And with Intel Wireless Display and a TV adapter, content can be easily streamed wirelessly from the device to a TV screen to share the experience with friends.

For more information about the technology that will make this school year easier and more fun, visit www.intel.com/ultrabook.

The School Lunch Program

The National School Lunch Program (NSLP) is a federally assisted meal program that provides nutritionally balanced, low-cost or free lunches to children each school day. Congress created the NSLP after an investigation into the health of young men rejected in the World War II draft revealed a connection between physical deficiencies and childhood malnutrition. Congress enacted the 1946 National School Lunch Act as a "measure of national security, to safeguard the health and well-being of the Nation's children."

Our school lunch program complies with the United States Department of Agriculture's food based menu-planning system and nutrient standards, providing meals that meet 1/3 of the RDA (recommended dietary allowance) for calories, as well as required levels of other key nutrients, including fat, saturated fat, protein, vitamin A & C, iron, and calcium. Hot lunches are served daily in all the schools. Students may choose from a variety of lunch options including alternate meals at all grade levels. The high school has more choices including a salad bar and a pizza line. The middle and the high schools also have a snack bar with a wide variety of approved snack items.

Free and Reduced Lunches

Free and reduced lunches are available for eligible students; both generally require the household to fill out a school meals application. If you think your household may qualify, please contact the Food Service Office at 978.694.6064 for more information and application forms.

Menus

Our menus are developed monthly to reflect the students' tastes and preferences. The monthly menu is posted on the Wilmington Public School website, in the local newspaper and a paper copy may be obtained at your child's school, in the office area.

Make sure your kids protect their electronic devices

(StatePoint) The technology used at school and at home by young people may be more expensive and sophisticated than in the past, but kids are still kids. Parents need to take steps to ensure their children make the most of their devices and protect their gear.

Here are some things to consider before letting kids take their technology out of the house:

- Don't opt for the most souped-up devices until you can trust your kids. Buy basic models first or buy used ones until your kids prove themselves responsible.

- Consider extended warranties for valuable tech items.

- Protective cases should be used whenever devices aren't in use, especially when traveling to school and on family vacations. Save money and simplify with a universal case that allots for storage of cables and other accessories. For example, the iEssentials Universal Tablet Case Series works with the Apple iPad, Android based tablets, and all e-readers, including Kindle and Nook. This way, your child can use the case with any device - even those you haven't yet bought!

- Instill great habits in your children like never leaving devices in the car, especially during extreme weather. Teach children to lock devices in a safe place during the school day, and never to leave open drinks near tablets and e-readers.

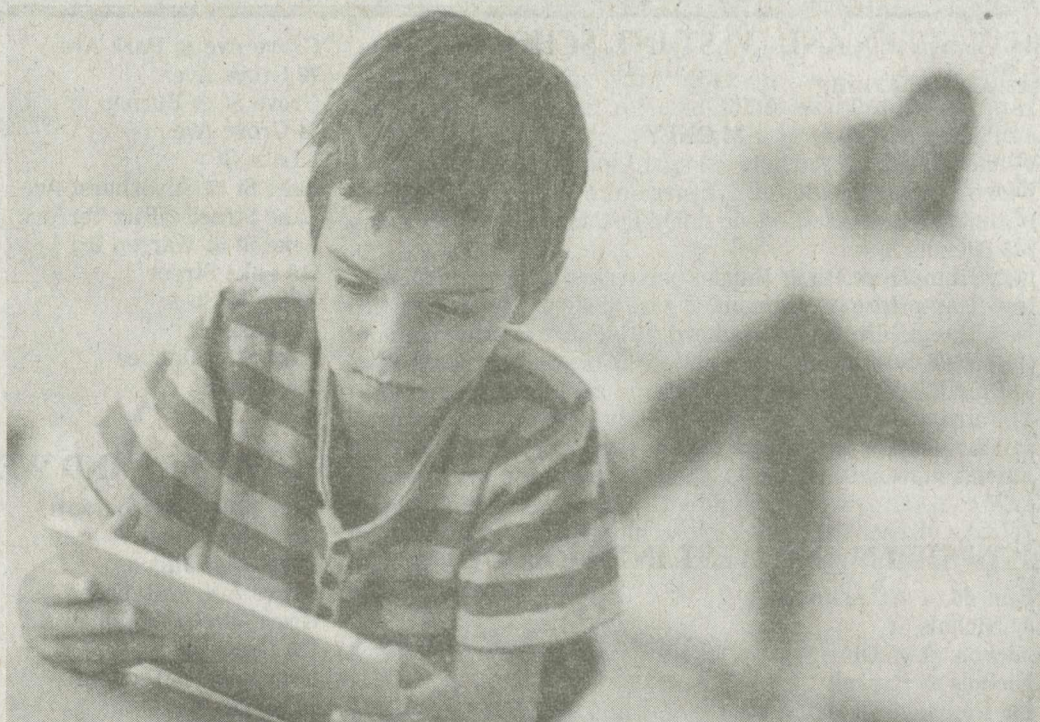

- Get extra cables and chargers. Kids are prone to lose wires and accessories. To save money and time, choose a compact universal charger that works with all devices. For example, the DigiPower Cross-Brand Tablet Charger works on all USB-powered tablets from Apple, Samsung, HTC and BlackBerry. Such chargers are ideal for use on-the-go, so that active but potentially forgetful kids don't end up with a low-battery dilemma!

- Impress upon your children the value of their gadgets with simple math. If they receive an allowance, calculate how long it would take them to save up enough to replace the device themselves. Or calculate the number of chocolate bars a gadget is equal to in cost. By putting it into terms they understand, they'll be more likely to protect their technology.

- If traveling light is a priority for your child, go with a form-fitting case that can be used on any device. For instance, Travelocity Travel Tablet Cases fit all 7 to 8 inch and 9 to 10 inch tablet or e-reader models, have a thin design ideal for travel, but still provide extra cushioning.

- Appeal to children's sense of individuality to entice them to always use protective cases on pricey devices. Let your kid guard that gadget with a stylish case with a snazzy design of his or her choosing.

More information on protecting your family's devices can be found at www.mizco.com.

Help your children help you save time and money by giving them the tools to protect their devices.

What parents need to know about changes in the classroom

(StatePoint) As technology evolves, so do the ways children learn in and out of the classroom. With constantly changing tools and trends, teachers can do more to stay up-to-date to help children thrive. It is important that parents understand what these changes mean so their children can maintain a competitive edge.

Here are some new trends in education that every parent should know about:

- More collaboration: If you think Facebook is all gossip and games, think again. Many teachers are drawing upon social media's natural collaborative element and ability to connect the classroom and home. In fact, some innovative teachers are using sites like Pinterest, Skype, Facebook and Twitter in a controlled, supervised way to make classroom materials more accessible and encourage conversation.

- Learning from each other: Since technology can change so rapidly, it's important that teachers share best practices by word of mouth. The newest social platform, Edmodo, built the first whole network of K-12 users and connects teachers with other teachers as well as parents, students and third-parties. Edmodo members can swap ideas, share lesson plans and manage grades in a secure network accessible from school computers. With more than eight million users across 60,000 different schools, the possibilities are endless.

- New tools: New technologies, such as tablets and e-readers, are helping students learn. These smaller devices offer students advantages over traditional computers, through interactive capabilities that bring lessons to life and enhanced images, video and audio. Tablets also have practical advantages such as "instant on," all-day battery life, no cords and are often more cost-effective than ordering new text books each year.

- Adding more fun: According to Open College, teachers who integrated digital games into lessons saw an increase in average test scores when compared to traditional, non-digital games. By making learning fun, you can get kids excited to learn just about anything and get some laughs along the way.

- Turn it off: In this digital era, it is also important to make sure students have the time to unplug. Not only does time outside offer children opportunities to get necessary exercise, but a 2009 Yeshiva University study found that children who have more recess time behave better in the classroom and are likelier to learn more.

So how can parents make sure schools have plans to fund programming that supports these new trends? Be proactive! For example, you can help now by nominating a new or existing K-12 program at your school to win a grant of up to $50,000 from The Clorox Company's Power a Bright Future Program.

To nominate your school for a chance to win, pick a program category from the fields of "Play," "Create," or "Explore," submit a photo and describe the program vision for your school at: www.PowerABrightFuture.com. Hurry, nominations close October 17, 2012.

Education is evolving all the time. Be sure to stay on top of changes so your children get a leg up on learning.

Protect Your Children From Cyberbullying

(StatePoint)- Most parents are familiar with traditional bullying that takes place at school and on the playground, but as life has gone digital, so has bullying.

"Cyberbullying, bullying that occurs through technology like computers and mobile devices, is often harder to detect than traditional bullying. The bully isn't immediately visible and may not even be known to the victim," says pediatrician Dr. Gwenn Schurgin O'Keeffe of the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) and author of "CyberSafe: Protecting and Empowering in the Digital World of Texting, Gaming, and Social Media."

"Because of this, cyberbullying is often more upsetting to victims, with even more profound and long-lasting effects," Dr. O'Keeffe said.

While the anonymous nature of the digital world does pose a challenge to identifying cyberbullies, O'Keeffe notes, parents can take an active role toward combating this 21st century problem.

Here are tips for parents to get a handle on cyberbullying, whether your child is a victim, a bystander or even participating in the bullying:

- Monitor your child's digital technology use. Be on the lookout for behaviors like quickly switching screens and having multiple passwords and accounts.

- Teach your child to come forward if he or she knows a friend is bullying others or being bullied. Being a bystander helps perpetuate the cycle and continue someone else's pain.

- You may think your child is safely using a digital device in the next room, but any child online is at risk for being bullied. Not all children are going to let you know if there's a problem, including teenagers. If your child is acting withdrawn, evasive or unusually sad -- especially after using a digital device such as a computer, video game or mobile phone -- ask if everything is okay. Regularly converse to open the line of communication.

- Cyberbullies may think they are acting anonymously, but they can be tracked by authorities. If your child is a victim, save the offending emails, IMs, and texts, and get the school involved if possible.

- If you worry your child is in serious danger, or the other parents refuse to help end bullying, call the police.

- Find out what your child's school's policies are on bullying, cyberbullying and digital devices. If the rules are insufficient, talk to the teachers and principal about establishing sensible regulations.

- Don't raise a bully! Foster empathy by talking regularly about how actions and words affect others. Set a good example by always treating others with respect yourself, both online and offline.

- Help children develop constructive strategies for getting what they want that don't include teasing, threatening or hurting others.

- Don't assume that a normally well-behaved child is guilt-free. The faceless digital world makes it easy for even good kids to sometimes be mean.

More information about cyberbullying can be found on the AAP parenting website, www.healthychildren.org.

With a new school year come new challenges. Learn about the realities of cyberbullying and what you can do to protect your children.

School lunch vs. bag lunch: What's best for your kids?

(ARA) - Bag it or buy it? What's healthier and what will they eat? It's a question faced by parents each school year. Often, there's an assumption that bagging is better, but there's also the convenience and choices of school lunch to consider. Good news: both the tray and the tote can be winning meals. A few important facts can help make this year's lunchtime decisions a breeze.

New school lunch initiatives

Much attention has been paid to children's health and there's an increased awareness that lunch at school is a critical source of nutrition for students. New federal guidelines have been introduced to ensure that menus provide more whole grains, more fruits and vegetables and less fat and sodium. Thanks to dedicated efforts driven by schools, parents and the federal government, many positive changes are occurring.

"There's a lot happening in the lunch line," says Dr. Brian Wansink, researcher and professor at Cornell University. Wansink and Dr. David Just, researcher and associate professor at Cornell University, created Smarter Lunchrooms, a multi-faceted program that provides schools with tools that can improve children's eating behaviors in the cafeteria.

"It's a common misconception that kids won't eat healthy foods, but our work shows that not to be the case. We can encourage healthy choices in the way we present foods to kids," says Wansink. He and his team have carefully studied the cafeteria line and how kids choose foods. The placement of foods on the lunch line, how foods are named on the menu and offering choices significantly affect which foods kids select.

For example, moving fruit from a commercial bin to an attractive fruit bowl near the end of the line is proven to increase selection. "Banning favorite foods such as tacos and pizza from a cafeteria can backfire," adds Wansink. "When kids feel restricted or forced into a decision, they rebel and may choose not to eat. Nobody wins in that scenario. We know a healthy lunch is necessary for good school performance."

Companies have stepped up to improve nutrition by creating new versions of kid-favorite foods that meet the new USDA school meal rules. Stir-fry, tacos, pastas and pizzas have become healthy fare as lower fat, lower sodium, whole grain versions have been introduced. For example, Schwan's Food Service created Big Daddy's(R) Cheese Pizza with a 51 percent whole-grain crust. It contains 25 percent Daily Value (DV) of calcium, as well as healthy amounts of potassium and protein, for less than 320 calories. Spicier sauces and more ethnic food choices are meeting students' expanded flavor palates, too.

As of this fall, school lunches will also offer more produce, including dark green, red and orange vegetables, dry beans and legumes, all of which are nutrient-rich. More farm-to-school programs add the option of locally grown produce for portions of the school year.

Bag lunch betterments

Much like the cafeteria, the quality of a bag lunch hinges on what's been chosen and eaten. To paraphrase Wansink, it's not nutrition until it's eaten.

One easy step to improve the quality of a bag lunch and the chance it will be enjoyed is to increase your kids' involvement in the process. Have them help shop for foods and talk to them about which food categories make a lunch that makes a difference. Then have them help bag it up.

Remember that drinks matter at lunchtime. Soda, fruit drinks, and popular energy drinks and sports drinks lack calcium and often contain added sugars. That's a problem. Up to 90 percent of a person's bone density is formed by age 18 and those school years are crucial for building bone strength to last a lifetime. Be sure to pack a calcium-rich drink.

New grains and new ways of making bread mean better whole grain bread choices are available for sandwiches. Breads can be soft and moist yet still deliver whole grain goodness plus, in some cases, enough nutrients to rival fruits and vegetables.

Food safety is a big concern for bag lunches. Perishable foods need to be eaten within two hours if they're left at room temperature and most brown bag lunches sit in a desk or locker for longer than that, turning them into bacteria havens and making them risky to eat. Home-packed meals need to be put in insulated, chilled bags that will keep foods in a safe temperature zone, sometimes for four or five hours. If your child isn't keen on carrying an insulated bag (many older kids aren't), or to reduce overall food safety risks, school lunches are an easy, nutritious fix.

Lunchtime is a highlight of many school days and an essential part of a productive one. Talk with your kids about what they eat and how lunch can help or hold them back from learning, running faster at recess or performing their best in after school activities. A healthful lunch will keep them fully fueled for the rest of their day.

Top five back-to-school organizing tips

(ARA) - The start of a new school year is like a fresh box of crayons - full of possibilities.

Ginny Bean, mother of three and publisher of Ginny's catalog, suggests families take advantage of this clean slate by establishing some new organizing routines.

Think ahead. Mornings are chaotic in most households with school-aged children. Consider handling as many daytime preparations as possible the night before. Lay out clothes. Pack lunches. Set out the breakfast dishes and cereal. Pack backpacks.

Bean suggests making systems kid-friendly, so young helpers can feel involved, and save mom some time in the process. "Carve out a spot on a lower shelf of the pantry for lunch boxes and lunch-making supplies. Then make children responsible for putting away their empty lunch boxes at the end of the school day, or even packing their own lunch."

Tackle school paperwork. Make a habit of sorting through children's backpacks with them the same day they come home. Allot time after school, when you arrive home from work, or after dinner, depending on your family's schedule. Use a tiered letter sorter or filing system with designated slots for each child's papers, and an "A.S.A.P." space for teachers' notes, permission slips and anything else that requires immediate attention.

For schoolwork and artwork you want to keep, try a two-step approach. First, purge unwanted items as soon as they come in the door. Collect the possible keepers in a storage bin or wheeled cart with color-coded drawers that allow for easy separation by child or project type. Go through stored items at regular intervals, perhaps once a month or once a quarter. Keep in mind, the more you accumulate, the easier it will be to pare down, as the best pieces will stand out from the crowd.

Designate a homework spot. Decide on the best spot in your home to set up homework central. Take into consideration how involved you need to be with homework and your child's style. Does he focus better with people around or in a private setting? Is he better suited to sit at a desk or curled up in a favorite chair with a laptop cart?

Once you have a place picked out, gather together handy homework tools and supplies into a nearby bin, drawer or cabinet. Stock up on age-appropriate supplies such as pens, pencils, erasers, paper, crayons, markers, a ruler, dictionary, calculator and a pencil sharpener.

Create a communication hub. Include the family calendar, a chalk or bulletin board for posting messages and reminders, a binder for key documents, colored markers, pens and pencils. If you're a visual person, consider color coding your calendar by assigning each family member a different color.

Remember not to forget. Use wall hooks and baskets or bins near the front door to corral the items you need to remember each day: backpacks, books, lunches, gym shoes, sports equipment and musical instruments.

Tips to provide your child with a fun, nutritious school lunch

(ARA) - School is back in session and parents and children alike are gearing up for a new year and all the fun and chaos that go along with it. Whether it's your child's first ever school day or the last year before college, it's important to take a moment to check off all the things they will need for a great year - and a healthy lunch is right at the top.

With school supply shopping and new outfit hunting in full swing, it can be easy to overlook planning nutritious lunches. "But don't count out lunch," says Elizabeth Ward, registered dietitian, mother of three, and author of "MyPlate for Moms, How to Feed Yourself & Your Family Better: Decoding the Dietary Guidelines for Your Real Life." In fact, students who eat a nutritious, balanced diet are better prepared to learn, reports the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development (ASCD).

"School lunch is more than just a meal - it's an opportunity for good nutrition and teaching during children's prime learning hours," says Ward. "Children are always growing and developing, both physically and mentally, so providing them with great lunch nutrition keeps them healthy in and out of the classroom."

Although many schools serve hot lunches each day, the only way to be certain your child is getting the nutrients he/she needs is to send a lunch with them to school that you're sure they will enjoy. Additionally, parents need to remember that while their own bodies are finished growing and developing, a child's isn't, and their meals and snacks should be jammed packed with good nutrition. Breakfast and lunch provide the opportunity to make sure your kids are eating the food they need before they come home for dinner with the family.

Ward offers the following tips to help keep your child eating healthy during school hours:

- * Talk to your children. Ask them what they would like to eat for lunch and teach them where food comes from. Involving children in meal planning will make the process more fun. Packing lunch with their favorite character on their Thermos brand lunch kit will make their meal even more enjoyable.

- * Check with the school to see how close snack time is to lunch. This will help you determine how much food to pack for your children. Portion control is important for a healthy, balanced diet. Since children are smaller than adults, they should eat smaller portions, too.

- * Lunch can be more than just the traditional milk, sandwich and fruit. Eating the same thing every day may get boring fast. As long as the food is healthy, you don't need to get hung up on serving a traditional lunch. Use a Thermos vacuum insulated FUNtainer food jar, which keeps food hot for five hours or cold for seven hours, to pack leftovers from dinner, a hearty stew or soup, or fruit salad with low-fat yogurt. Alternate cold meals and hot to keep your child's interest. If your child craves pizza, make one at home with low-fat cheese and vegetables. Use sunflower seed butter or olive oil instead of regular butter, and make sure milk, cheese and yogurt are low or non-fat. If you want to send a sandwich for lunch, try making it on a whole-wheat bagel, pita pocket or sandwich wrap.

- * Give your child an alternative to sugary soda and juice drinks by packing ice water with fruit slices in a Thermos FUNtainer bottle. The fruit will add the sweet taste your child craves, without the added sugar. There is no nutritional value to sugary drinks, so cutting them out of your child's diet and helping them understand why you're doing so early on will benefit them in the long run. As a bonus, the insulated bottle will keep drinks icy cold for up to 12 hours.

- * Provide a balanced meal. Keep kids fueled during and after school by offering essentials packed with fiber or protein, which will also help reduce snacking urges. Fiber, dairy foods, and protein-packed fare are essential to keeping kids fueled during and after school for activities, and reducing the urge to snack. Children eat what is available, so having carrot sticks and hummus available keeps kids' minds off of cookies, candy, and chips. Send protein-rich Greek yogurt with fruit and nuts or whip up a smoothie made with fruit and milk and send in an insulated straw bottle.

Better Business Bureau cautions against button-pushing as FTC takes action

Marlborough - Consider yourself among the very fortunate few if you have never picked up the phone and been greeted by a recorded "robocall."

The federal Telemarketing Sales Rule prohibits recorded sales messages unless you have given written permission for the caller to contact you, regardless of whether or not your number is on the Do Not Call registry (www.donotcall.gov).

Nonetheless, a growing number of consumers are receiving calls that offer fraudulent credit card services, questionable auto warranty plans, home security systems and grant procurement programs. Many Americans have received offers from "Stacey" or "Rachel" from "Cardholder Services" on their landlines and cell phones.

There is an important difference between "robocaller," which dials numbers indiscriminately and usually plays a recorded introduction - and an automatically-dialed recorded call for a sales pitch.

Other, similar technology uses an automated dialer and prerecorded message for legitimate uses. These may be employed by a city or town during or in the aftermath of some sort of an emergency. Your doctor's office or pharmacy may use a prerecorded message to remind you about an upcoming appointment or let you know that your prescription is ready for pickup.

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has used its enforcement authority to stop companies that have made billions of auto-dialed calls, but acknowledges that technology has helped significantly increase these calls in recent years. This technology helps criminals generate calls from anywhere in the world and falsify caller ID technology to cover their steps.

The FTC is hosting a public summit on the issue October 18, 2012 for consumer groups, legitimate industry, technology experts and policymakers in an effort to develop solutions to put an end to the rapid rise in robocalls.

While there is currently no fool-proof way for consumers to stop these calls except for changing telephone numbers, BBB recommends:

- Keep your number to yourself - Any time you divulge your telephone number to a retailer, financial institution or other business, it is a tacit invitation for them to call that number or sell it to a third party.

Robocaller databases may be augmented by telephone numbers sold by a third party.

- Hang up right away - Recorded marketing calls typically begin with a second or two of silence. There is nothing to gain from attempting to reason with the people behind the calls. Speak with your telephone provider to see if it can provide free blocking services. Unfortunately, the telephone number displayed on caller ID may not be legitimate.

- Do not press 1 or any other numerals to "get yourself off the list" - By pressing a number, you are confirming that someone is actually responding to the call, and you will likely receive more of them. You also may file a complaint with the FTC.

Will these pesky calls ever end? The Federal Trade Commission website states it is gathering evidence to act upon the illegal calls, and "FTC staff continue to hold meetings and calls with engineers, technologists, and industry experts to discuss technological solutions to better trace illegal calls, combat caller ID spoofing, and stop illegal calls."

New book tells the story of longtime North Reading family

"One Letter at a Time"

By PAUL FEELY

The sight of former North Reading residents Dick and Rick Hoyt, a father pushing his wheelchair-bound son as both complete the Boston Marathon, has provided inspiration to people throughout New England - and the world - for decades.

Now the inspirational tale of Rick's life is the subject of a new book, scheduled to hit the shelves in bookstores this week.

"One Letter at a Time" tells Rick's story in his own words, and also contains dozens of stories written by those who have had their lives positively impacted by Rick, including co-author Todd Civin, his father, Dick, his brothers, Rob and Russell, former professors and personal care attendants, Easter Seals President, Kirk Joslin and multi-E Emmy Award-winning broadcast journalist, Barry Nolan.

"It's been an honor to be such an inspiration," said Rick Hoyt. "I love hearing stories from different people of how I may have inspired or touched someones life."

To tell his story, Rick Hoyt used a specially designed computer along with his unique method of communicating.

Rick was born a non-verbal spastic, quadriplegic with Cerebral Palsy. He has competed in nearly 1100 athletic competitions with the help of his father, Dick, including 30 Boston Marathons. The new book tells stories of Rick's independent life, of his graduation from Boston University and of his successes and challenges on and off the race circuit.

"Though Rick has lived life as a non-verbal spastic quadriplegic with cerebral palsy, he and I have collaborated for over a year to tell the amazing stories of his life in this exciting new book as told through his own words, thoughts and recollections," said Todd Civin, who co-authored the book with Rick.

Though he hasn't lived in North Reading for many years now, Rick said he has good memories of the town.

"My family left North Reading when I was 13 years old," wrote Rick. "I remember that both my grandparents are from there. My dad had built our second home in North Reading. We had lots of cookouts."

"I do remember that the whole town helped our family raise money for my first communicator."

For those who don't know the complete story, Rick has lived his entire life in a wheelchair, unable to speak or control his body from the neck down. Despite his disability Rick has attended public schools, graduated from Boston University with a degree in Special Education and lives life independently in his own apartment.

Rick was born in 1962 to Dick and Judy Hoyt. As a result of oxygen deprivation to Rick's brain at the time of his birth, Rick was diagnosed as a spastic quadriplegic with cerebral palsy. Dick and Judy were advised to institutionalize Rick because there was no chance of him recovering, and little hope for Rick to live a "normal" life.

LONGTIME NORTH READING RESIDENTS RICK AND DICK HOYT pose for a photo with their new book "One Letter at a Time." The book tells Rick's story in his own words, and also contains dozens of stories written by those who have had their lives positively impacted by Rick.

Dick and Judy soon realized that though Rick couldn't walk or speak, he was quite aware of his surroundings, and his eyes would follow them around the room. They fought to integrate Rick into the public school system, pushing administrators to see beyond Rick's physical limitations.

Dick and Judy would take Rick sledding and swimming, and even taught him the alphabet and basic words, like any other child. After providing concrete evidence of Rick's intellect and ability to learn like everyone else, the couple set out to find a way to help Rick communicate for himself.

In 1972, with $5,000 and a skilled group of engineers at Tufts University, an interactive computer was built for Rick. This computer consisted of a cursor being used to highlight every letter of the alphabet. Once the letter Rick wanted was highlighted, he was able to select it by just a simple tap with his head against a head piece attached to his wheelchair.

When the computer was originally first brought home, Rick surprised everyone with his first words.

"Instead of what you would expect him to say, something like 'Hi, Mom,' or 'Hi, Dad,' Rick's first 'spoken' words were 'Go, Bruins!'" said Dick Hoyt. "The Bruins were in the Stanley Cup finals that season."

In 1975, at the age of 13, Rick was finally admitted into public school.

"School was hard, it took me a while due to my lack of communication," said Rick. "However my mom helped fight for me to attend public school and to get an IEP (Individualized Education Program) that would extend

Hoyt to S-9

"ParaNorman" fabulous entertainment

COMEDY/HORROR FILM "PARANORMAN" combines brilliantly crafted stop-motion animation with a campy, dark tale to create fabulous entertainment for audiences of all ages. It's easily the most creative animated film of the year.

"PARANORMAN"
GRADE: ***

This comedy/horror film combines brilliantly crafted stop-motion animation with a campy, dark tale to create fabulous entertainment for audiences of all ages.

"ParaNorman," based on an original script by co-director Chris Butler, is the story of Norman Babcock, a small town boy who's made fun and picked on by everyone, including his family, because he claims (truthfully, as it turns out) to be able to talk with the dead.

It turns out that the town is, unknowingly, living under a curse cast centuries ago by a girl whom the Puritan founders burned as a witch. Norman, it turns out, is descended from a line of 'necromancers' who are able to soothe the spirit of the witch to sleep and prevent her from taking her vengeance. But Norman doesn't learn about his powers until it may be too late to stop the witch from wreaking havoc on the town.

Butler and co-director Sam Fell have terrific fun with this material, using it as a launching pad to poke fun at the conventions of horror movies, at school-age trauma, and at modern family life. The film is filled with humor aimed at tweens, spiced with just the right degree of horror to engage kids who've outgrown "Goosebumps" books but are too young for slash-er films.

The animation style Butler and Fell utilize is unlike the normal fare and the blend of stop-motion, CGI and 3D gives the film a unique look that works very well, especially when conveying herky-jerky movements made by the zombies. The human characters are done in exaggerated style for maximum visual humor and their fun designs get the easy laughs, but their expressive animations convey emotions well.

The middle gets a bit clunky and the one point where the script feels like it's treading on familiar animated conventions and clichés instead of continuing down its own unique path, but Butler and Fell really put together a very creative, thoughtful final act that leaves a strong impression. It's such an effective finale that you'll forgive the slower bits.

"ParaNorman" definitely delivers and is easily the most creative animated film this year.

THE BOURNE LEGACY
GRADE: **

Can a movie franchise be reborn without Bourne?

That's the question producers of the Jason Bourne movie franchise were left with after star Matt Damon and director Paul Greengrass (Bourne Supremacy, Bourne Ultimatum) refused to return for another installment of the highly lucrative action trilogy.

The Bourne Legacy is a cross between a series reboot and a sequel to the original franchise, with the co-writer of the first three films, Tony Gilroy, sitting in the director's chair for the first time. The results are mostly entertaining, even if this newest installment doesn't quite stand up to the original.

Running in parallel to the first three movies, The Bourne Legacy focuses on CIA agent Eric Byer's (Edward Norton) attempt to shut down the government's secret Outcome program - a chemical-based offshoot of the process that created Jason Bourne - by killing its key scientists and all the super agents it produced. He's forced to do this because Damon's Bourne has made public the agency's Treadstone program.

One of the agents marked for execution is Aaron Cross (Jeremy Renner), who survives the attempt on his life and then fakes his death. This buys him time to track down biochemist Dr. Marta Shearing (Rachel Weisz) and enlist her aid in getting him the drugs he needs to keep his abilities. But Shearing is targeted for termination as well, which sets off a globetrotting game of cat and mouse.

Gilroy's attempts to interconnect Cross' situation with the events of the previous Bourne films is a good one, but a double-edged sword. While Jason Bourne's actions effectively drive and contextualize Legacy's complicated narrative, they also remind the viewer of how good the first three films were.

Gilroy doesn't seem to know how to capitalize on Renner's darker, tougher personality. The actor brings great energy and intensity to his role, but none of that is exploited or integrated within the story. Instead, Gilroy has him repeatedly rescue Weisz from average agents, cops and security guards.

None of these shortcomings are fatal; the movie has enough energy and velocity to keep you engaged and interested, but taken together they reveal The Bourne Legacy's flaws.

Gilroy's inability to handle fight sequences is apparent in a 20 minute motorcycle chase in the third act of the film. You can see what Gilroy's trying to do, but he doesn't have the skill to pull it off. It's a chaotic mess.

"TOTAL RECALL"
GRADE: **

It's probably not fair to compare the remake of "Total Recall" to the original, but it's almost impossible not to.

The comparison actually favors the new version a bit. Directed by Len Wiseman with a lot less humor than Paul Verhoeven's 1990 original, the new film will probably play better to those whose memories hold bits of the first, who recognize certain elements - ironic in a film that centers around memories.

For those who never saw the original, the new version will likely come off like a big action movie - a little smarter than some, but really nothing special.

Colin Farrell plays the role that helped launch Arnold Schwarzenegger as an action star. Farrell can act much better Schwarzenegger, but he brings none of the same wit and one-liners to the role. There's not as much humor, good or bad, in the new "Total Recall," and what there is seems forced.

Farrell can be a funny guy (he was hilarious in "Horrible Bosses"), but not here. The idea is still based on the Philip K. Dick short story "We Can Remember It for You Wholesale." The first film took liberties with the story; this film drifts away from the first. No Mars, no aliens, no conjoined twins. The three-breasted hooker is still around, though.

This time around Douglas Quaid (Farrell) works in a factory that makes synthetic cops. His wife, Lori (Kate Beckinsale), is an EMT. It's not the life they wanted, living in a ratty apartment - the look of Wiseman's film has more in common with "Blade Runner" than the original film. Again, there is no Mars. All that's left of inhabitable Earth is the federation of Britain and "the Colony" - Australia. Workers travel back and forth by way of "The Fall," a sort of super-duper elevator that burrows through the Earth till it comes out the other side.

Rebels, led by a leader named Mathias (Bill Nighy), want to overthrow the federation, which is run by the ruthless Chancellor Coahaagen (Bryan Cranston). But the most important part of the story, the issues of identity and trust - the question of whether any of this is really happening - fall short here.

It's a loud action movie, and not much deeper than that.

Monday, August 27 at JFK Library Talk to astronauts on the International Space Station

Come to the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library for a special opportunity to ask questions to two American astronauts living and working on the International Space Station between 11:45 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. on Monday, August 27.

Joe Acaba arrived on the Space Station May 15 and will depart on September 17. Suni Williams, who graduated from Needham High School in 1983, arrived on the Space Station July 15.

On August 30, Suni will be the lead spacewalker (her fifth walk in space) and will be replacing one of the main electrical units, which will take approximately six-and-a-half hours. She will be living on the Station until January 2013.

Satellite hookup will allow forum attendees to both see and hear the astronauts on the International Space Station.

Children eight years and older, students, and adults may be chosen to ask a pre-selected question to the astronauts.

If you would like to ask a question, please send an emailing to jfkforums@nara.gov after you have registered or calling 617-514-1643. You will be notified if you have been selected.

For all others interested in attending, please make a reservation online or call 617-514-1643.

The John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum is located at Columbia Point in Boston.

Identity theft to be topic of discussion at Flint

Identity theft is a topic of great concern to many people these days. Between email accounts, credit cards, and electronic devices, people are often worried about how to protect themselves from possible fraud or scams.

To address these issues, The Better Business Bureau of Boston will present a program on Identity Theft, Tuesday, September 18, at 7PM, at the

Flint Memorial Library, 147 Park Street,

North Reading. Participants will find out how to prevent identity theft and what to do if it does happen to them.

The program is free and open to the public. Sponsored by the Friends. Registration is requested. Please call 978-664-4942 to register.

Please check your local "Daily Times Chronicle" for daily updates.

SOLAR SUCCESS (TEWKSBURY)

"As part of Tewksbury's designation as a Massachusetts Green Community, the town received five Big Belly Solar Trash Compactors," notes the Tewksbury "Town Crier."

"These trash compactors were provided at no cost to the town by a grant from the Massachusetts Department of Energy Resources-Green Communities Division and utilize solar energy to compact trash and recyclables.

"The Big Belly Solar Trash Compactors have been installed at the following locations: the Town Common, the Wynn Middle School, the Tewksbury Public Library and two at the Livingston Recreation Area. Four of the compactors are for both solid and recyclable waste, while the compactor at the Town Common is specifically for solid waste.

"Not only will the compactors serve the community functionally by efficiently compacting waste, they will also serve as a demonstration of how solar energy can work in the field...."

TAKING TIME TO SMELL THE FLOWERS (READING)

Speaking of fields ...

"About a half-mile from the Reading train stop, there is a little white house with a big bright garden. Well, three gardens, really," notes the Reading edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"These are Reading Garden Club member Betty Walsh's gardens. She has gardened here since 1969, the year she and her husband moved in....

"First, there is the Peace Garden, the front yard garden that boldly and cheerfully greets you at the street. It is a riot of lilies, black-eyed susans, and coneflowers, planted beyond the sidewalk and onto the berm, spilling all the way down to the curb....

"The second garden is to the right of the house; this is the Circle of Life Garden....

"The third garden is in the back, although it is also clearly visible from the side of the house; that is the Oasis Garden...."

MISSION ACCOMPLISHED (WINCHESTER)

"For 20 years the Winchester Multicultural Network (WMN) has attempted to make the town inclusive and welcoming," notes the Winchester edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"... they continued that mission by asking the Board of Selectmen to update the town's Human Rights Statement to include transgendered people.

"When the board first accepted the Human Rights Statement that the WMN brought forward, it didn't include a line pertaining to transgendered people because their rights hadn't yet been protected under Massachusetts law. Last November, the legislature passed, and the Governor signed into law, the Transgendered Equal Rights Law...."

"The WMN informed the selectmen that there wouldn't be any cost implications associated with the change.

"The board voted in the affirmative to make the change with Selectman Tom Howley showing his appreciation for what the WMN has done for the town...."

CHALLENGE MET (WAKEFIELD)

According to an editor's note in the Wakefield edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle," the Wakefield Commission on Disability Issues (CDI) prepared the ... Annual Report for inclusion in the Town Report. It was omitted, and they wanted to inform the community of their accomplishments.

"...The CDI gives citizens and others the opportunity to communicate with the Commission through our web site to ask questions, request help and referral resources, and receive a wealth of information important to persons with disabilities and the larger community," notes the Wakefield edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

Recent CDI accomplishments include: reviewing all residential and municipal handicapped parking spaces; adding five new municipal handicapped parking spaces in the downtown business area; updating a brochure (available in several local places such as Town Hall, and on the website) that includes all municipal parking spaces; working with the Events Committee to ensure temporary parking spaces when Main St. is blocked; providing scholarships to the Little League Challenger Division to supplement membership fees; and continually reviewing special-needs-program needs with the School Department.

For more information, contact cdi@wakefieldcdi.com or call Town Hall at 781-246-6300 to express concerns, and the information will be forwarded to the CDI.

"About the Towns" covers recent events in the 10-town Middlesex East area. Because Middlesex East deadlines are early, please check the front sections of this paper or look on line for up-to-date information about your city or town.

We also welcome original material - please send it to Phyllis Nissen, "About the Towns," Middlesex East Supplement, Box 240, Reading, MA 01867 or to schooltowns@comcast.net.

MIDDLESEX EAST SPORTS WEEKLY TRIVIA:

In the movie "The Natural", Roy Hobbs carries his bat "Wonderboy" in a case that originally held what?

Answer appears elsewhere in this column.

The winningest coach in Division II women's soccer history, head coach Gabe Mejail announced the 2012 Merrimack women's soccer schedule recently. Mejail and the Warriors are looking for their 29th consecutive winning season in 2012.

"We begin every season with high expectations, but we also know that our conference is so competitive that we will need to match our hopes with a strong desire and a superior effort," stated Mejail.

The Warriors will play three straight games on the road to begin the season, beginning with the Dowling Kickoff Classic on August 31 against Molloy and September 2 against Dowling. Merrimack will then travel to take on non conference foe, Queens.

"We are once again looking forward to another successful season soon to get underway as we'll be reporting to pre-season camp on Thursday, August 16," said Mejail. "We hope to continue our winning tradition as we set off for our first three matches in Long Island, NY before we begin our challenging Northeast-10 schedule."

In 2011, Merrimack recorded a 16-4-2 record, 11-2-1 in the Northeast-10, finishing second overall in the conference and qualifying for the NCAA Tournament for the fourth time in five seasons.

Mejail returns his four leading scorers from last season, junior forward Danielle Dion (Grosvenordale, CT), junior forward Jenna Zechner (Billerica, Mass.), sophomore Katie Bresciani (Hopedale, MA) and senior Jenn Pino (North Andover, Mass.) for 2012.

"Some key returnees include All-Star performers Dion, midfielders Bresciani and Sarah Coakley (Medway, MA) along with top-scorer Zechner. The backfield will definitely have a new look from 2012, as there will be three new starters and a new goalkeeper in the Warrior defensive end."

The Warriors will open conference play with their home opener against Southern Connecticut State on September 9 and follow that up with a game against Franklin Pierce on September 12.

Merrimack will play three of the next five games on the road to end September. The Warriors open up October with two straight home contests as they will host Saint Anselm on October 3 and American International on October 6.

Mejail's squad will have a challenging three-game road trip in early October, taking on Stonehill, Saint Rose, who defeated Merrimack last year in the NCAA Tournament and went on to win the National Championship, and Saint Michael's.

"As usual there will be a lot of pressure on many of our players, including our three captains, senior midfielders Jamie Alnwick (Groton, MA), Pino and LAURA SPANG (WAKEFIELD, MA), who will have the task of leading a team that will blend youth and experience on our way to the challenge that is the Northeast-10 Conference.

Merrimack closes out its regular season with two home games against Adelphi and Bentley before going on the road to take on Assumption.

The UMass Lowell women's soccer team, fresh off arguably the best season in program history, came in at No. 17 in the NSCAA/Continental Tire Division II 2012 Preseason Rankings, released Wednesday.

UMass Lowell posted an 11-6-4 overall record in 2011, including a Northeast-10 Conference clip of 10-3-2, good for third place. The River Hawks advanced to the NCAA Tournament East Region Championship match - marking its lengthiest stay in five appearances in the NCAA's - where it fell to national champion Saint Rose, 2-1.

Saint Rose (24-1-1) was selected No. 1 in the poll while Merrimack (16-4-2) was among a handful of colleges receiving votes. The University of Bridgeport (16-0-1), which UMass Lowell defeated in the second round of the East Regional, was picked No. 12 to cap the East Region schools in the poll.

"It's another step forward for the program to be nationally ranked in the first poll of the season, but we are starting from scratch again," said head coach Elie Monteiro, entering his 11th year. "We had a good run in the Tournament last season and the motivation is to return to that playing level and experience that again."

UMass Lowell returns 14 veterans and six starters for the 2012 season, including NE-10 Rookie of the Year and First Team honoree Brittany Russo (Danvers, Mass.), who led the team with 10 goals and one assist. Also back is Russo's strike partner Keanna Santos (Lakeville, Mass.), a senior, who added four goals and one assist in 2011.

HATZIKONSTANTIS (TEWKSBURY, MASS.),

also cited to the NE-10 All-Rookie Team, returns alongside junior goalkeeper Jill Carlson (Lexington, Mass.), who split time between the woodwork. The two keepers combined for nine clean sheets and a 0.45 goals against average while conceding only 17 goals.

Monteiro also welcomes back senior winger Jenna Costa (Attleboro, Mass.), who chipped in one goal and six assists; as well as senior defenders Taylor Hartmann (Feeding Hills, Mass.), a NE-10 Second Team standout, and Casey Schulze (Chelmsford, Mass.), who each played a pivotal role in UMass Lowell's paltry goals against average.

UMass Lowell opens the season Friday, Aug. 31 as it hosts the River Hawk Classic. LIU Post (formerly C.W. Post) meets American International College at 4:00 while the River Hawks meet Bridgeport at 7:00.

On Sunday, Sept. 2, the field is reversed as Bridgeport meets AIC at 2:00 while UMass Lowell hosts LIU Post at 5:00.

UMass Lowell opens its NE-10 slate Saturday, Sept. 8 at home against defending NCAA Champion Saint Rose at 3:00.

Need some help with the trivia question? It's a musical instrument.

The UMass Lowell Athletic Hall of Fame will induct four new members on Saturday, Sept. 29 as part of its second annual Dream of Perfect Games Celebration of Sport at the Inn & Conference Center.

Headlining the Class of 2012 is Nicole (Plante) Hunt '07, a nine-time All-American and NCAA champion in the 10,000 meters; Joanna DaLuzze '06, who led the field hockey team to the 2005 NCAA Championship; and WOBURN NATIVES JASON PAIGE '05, an All-American in soccer and track and field; and his brother MIKE PAIGE '02, a four-time All-American sprinter and standout soccer player.

The induction of the Paige brothers marks the second time a brother tandem has been inducted into the Athletic Hall of Fame. The Paiges join Brandon '03 and Jonathan Curran '05, both soccer standouts who were inducted in 2008 and 2010, respectively.

Additionally, the induction of Mike Paige completes the first husband-wife tandem in the Hall. Paige's wife, Jill (Croft) Paige '02, was inducted in 2008.

Members of the class of 2012 will be honored at the Celebration of Sport ceremony beginning at 6:30 p.m. Tickets cost $50 per person.

The five most deadly cancers

Cancer has surpassed heart disease as the foremost cause of death for people in North America. A cancer diagnosis can be life-altering. Although there are many successful treatments for cancer, there is no definitive cure. Plus, certain cancers continue to be more ominous than others.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, there are more than 100 types of cancer, characterized by their location in the body and abnormal cell growth in that area. Millions of dollars have been raised and spent on cancer research and finding new and innovative methods of treatment. Although the five-year survival rate for those with cancer in the United States has improved considerably over the last three decades, the National Cancer Institute still lists many cancers as the primary killers of many people. Here is the most recent classification of the five cancers that claim the most lives each year.

1. Lung cancer: Lung cancer is responsible for more deaths than any other cancer. Roughly 160,000 people succumb to lung and bronchial-related cancers each year. Although it is the most deadly, it is also the most preventable, as many cases of lung cancer are the result of certain lifestyle choices. Quitting smoking is the single most effective way to reduce your risk of lung cancer.

2. Colorectal cancer: In 2008, 52,857 Americans died from colorectal cancer, says the CDC. Most cases of colorectal cancer begin with groupings of small, benign cells called polyps that over time become cancerous. Screening is necessary to check for cancer of the colon and rectum, but because they are embarrassed and uncomfortable, many people avoid preventive measures.

3. Breast cancer: The second most common cancer in women, breast cancer can affect both sexes. It is also the most deadly cancer among women, with roughly 35 percent of the cases in the United States resulting in fatality.

4. Pancreatic cancer: The pancreas aids in digestion and metabolism. This cancer is deadly because it is difficult to detect in its early stages, as it does not always produce symptoms and the cancer tends to progress rapidly. Pancreatic cancer claims around 40,000 lives each year.

5. Prostate cancer: Prostate cancer is exclusive to men and is the second-leading cause of cancer deaths among them, according to the NCI. This type of cancer forms in the prostate, a gland that produces seminal fluid that carries sperm. It is estimated that 28,000 men will die from prostate cancer in 2012.

For students of all ages A Plus Tutoring, offers innovative educational services

A Plus Tutoring, located at 6 Eastman Place in Melrose, offers innovative educational services for students of all ages, including a brand new program: A Plus Math School.

The Math School, directed by former Melrose High teacher and coach John Brickley, is designed to help students compete on standardized tests (SAT) and pursue college mathematics, science and engineering studies. Students receive individualized instruction in Pre-algebra, Algebra 1, Algebra 2 and Geometry.

A Plus Math School begins Sept. 15 and runs all day on Saturdays as well as Tuesday and Thursday evenings for the entire school year.

Brickley taught mathematics at Melrose High School from 1982-1997 and has been working as a tutor (in math and test prep) since 2004.

"We're very excited to have John Brickley as Math Curriculum Coordinator for the Math School," said A Plus Director Cathy Scarlatos, a former teacher and tutor with more than 15 years of educational experience. "He's very enthusiastic and makes math fun for the students."

In addition to the Math School, A Plus provides preparation classes for the SAT and other standardized tests as well as programs for English, Math, Reading/Writing, Social Studies, Sciences and all major languages.

Other courses include English as a Second Language, GED (high school equivalency), study and organizational skills, and programs for challenged individuals. One-to-one classroom tutoring and in-home tutoring are also available.

Send kids back to school with healthy meals and snacks

Massachusetts - You've got the kids' backpacks ready with notebooks, pencils and paper, but what's your plan for packing healthy back-to-school lunches?

The American Heart Association recommends packing a healthy lunch at home to ensure that kids get the nutrition they need without all the fat, calories and salt found in convenience foods and many school lunch meals. Too much salt, calories and fat can contribute to long-term health issues like obesity, diabetes and high blood pressure.

Today, about one in three American kids and teens is overweight or obese; nearly triple the rate in 1963. Among children today, obesity is causing health problems that previously weren't seen until adulthood like type 2 diabetes, high blood pressure and elevated blood cholesterol levels. (Source: 2011 American Heart Association Understanding Childhood Obesity Statistical Sourcebook)

TIPS ON PACKING HEALTHY LUNCHES:

When packing a healthy lunch, try choosing from the rainbow of foods in your supermarket's produce department. Include foods that are red (red peppers, apples, tomatoes), orange (carrots, peaches), green (salad, celery sticks) and choose foods from the different food groups.

The Alliance for a Healthier Generation, founded in 2005 with the American Heart Association and the William J. Clinton Foundation, suggests including one serving of vegetables or salad and one serving of fruit (fresh, canned or dried all count); one serving of a low-fat or fat-free milk or dairy item such as a low-fat cheese stick, a yogurt cup, or some cottage cheese; plus one serving of meat, chicken, fish, eggs, peanut butter, beans or another protein source.

Pack healthy drinks such as water, low-fat milk or 100% juice with no added sugar. Beverages boxes frozen the night before can keep a lunch-box cool until lunchtime. Cut out the soda and energy drinks. These are filled with sugar, empty calories and provide little or no nutrition.

Sandwiches can be made on whole wheat bread, pita, wraps or flatbreads. Traditional luncheon meats are high in fat and sodium. When choosing luncheon meats; pick lean meats like turkey, ham or leftover chicken breast. Use reduced fat mayo or salad dressing or mustard to dress a sandwich and top with mixed greens or spinach for extra nutrients.

NOT THE SAME OLD SANDWICH

Pack hummus with fresh veggies and whole wheat pita triangles or flatbreads for dipping. Hummus is a good low-fat protein source and is high in iron and vitamin C. Or try low-fat or fat-free cottage cheese with carrots, cherry tomatoes, fresh berries, or melon for a calcium-rich, high-protein lunch.

Salads topped with lean protein like hard-boiled eggs, beans or chicken are a great alternative to sandwiches and they help get kids on track with their daily vegetable servings. In a hurry? Buy bags of lettuce or pre-cut carrots or make extra salad for dinner then pack the leftovers for lunch the next day.

Didn't pack a lunch? There are many options to choose from in the lunch line at school, some of them are healthier than others. Encourage kids to choose fruits and vegetables instead of French fries or chips and ask for grilled meat instead of fried. Check the school lunch menu and choose a healthier day for your kids to buy lunch.

HUNGRY AFTER SCHOOL?

When it comes to after school snacks, think energy, not fatty, high-calorie. Try baked potato or corn chips instead of fried. Keep a variety of salt-free nuts on hand for a high protein, essential fatty acid snack - but watch the portions. One-quarter cup of these high calorie nuts is a serving. Focus on fruits and vegetables. Cut them up for greater acceptance and serve plain or with yogurt, hummus or dip.

Stick to low-fat or light yogurt instead of the full calorie varieties targeted at children. To avoid artificial sweeteners, try fat-free plain yogurt mixed with fresh fruit.

Cereal is not just for breakfast. High-fiber, low sugar cereals are fortified with vitamins and nutrients. Pour a serving

Back to School!

A good night's sleep is still widely considered a luxury Easy ways to ensure a more restful night's sleep

Though many are aware it's one of life's necessities, a good night's sleep is still widely considered a luxury. Despite the knowledge that a good night's sleep is beneficial in many ways, affecting not only mood but physical health as well, it's still quite possibly the one necessity of life that people routinely sacrifice.

Consider doing the same with other necessities, such as food and shelter, and the willingness of many people to forgo sufficient regular rest seems wholly irresponsible. Most people would not go a day or a week without eating, yet it's common to go a night or week or even longer without once getting a good night's rest.

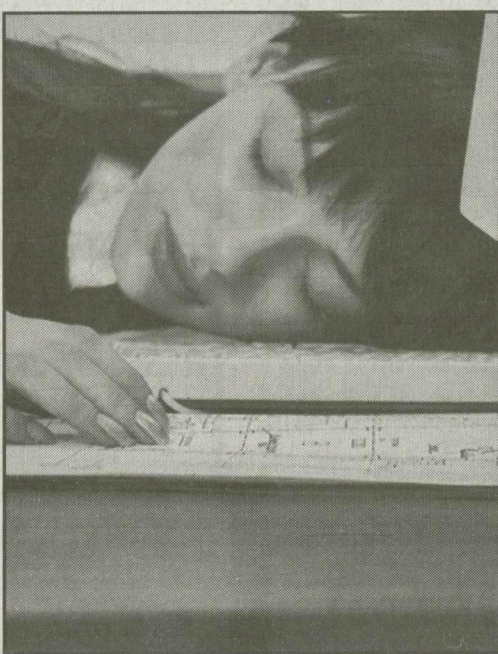

That reality is potentially very harmful, as sleep can influence productivity, memory, mood, and alertness. To ensure you're getting sufficient and beneficial rest, consider the following tips.

- * Keep a regular sleep schedule. Maintaining a regular bedtime and wakeup schedule helps alert the body to when it's time to go to sleep and wake up. While it's common to abandon such a routine on weekends, it's best to avoid completely deviating from a weekly sleep schedule every Friday and Saturday night. For instance, those who routinely go to bed around 11 p.m. on weeknights should not be hitting the sack at sunrise each and every weekend. Keep as consistent a sleep schedule as possible, even on weekends.

- * Sleep when it's dark outside. Nap aficionados will heap praise on the value of a daily midday nap. However, napping during the daytime could be the equivalent of stealing from Peter to pay Paul. While a daytime nap might be the rejuvenating boost you need in the middle of the day, it could very well be that you're tired during the day because you didn't sleep well overnight after taking a mid-afternoon nap.

- * Make things as comfortable as possible. Some people need absolute silence when sleeping, while others need to listen to music. Each individual is different, but creating a serene and soothing sleep environment can help ensure a quality night's rest. If necessary, use earplugs to block out any external noises.

- * Sleep on an adequate mattress. Sleeping problems often result from older mattresses that have worn out their welcome. Look for one that provides both comfort and support. Couples should also be sure their mattress is big enough to comfortably fit two people.

- * Keep eyes off the clock. It's probably a product of human nature, but many people, upon waking up in the middle of the night, quickly glance at the nearest clock. This should be avoided, as it often makes people start thinking about the sleep they're missing, indirectly making it more difficult to get back to sleep.

- * Get your exercise. Exercise is beneficial in many ways, not the least of which is promoting a better night's sleep. However, exercise also gets many people amped up, so it's best to finish an exercise several hours before bedtime to allow your heart rate to return to normal and your mind to calm down.

- * Stop eating and consuming caffeine several hours before bed. Eating shortly before bed can cause digestive problems, making it difficult to fall asleep or enjoy a good night's rest. It's also best to avoid caffeine and any other stimulants in the hours leading up to bedtime.

- * Make the bed simply a place to sleep. When you watch television from bed or work from bed, this can make it difficult to fall asleep in bed when it comes time to catch some Zzzzs. In general, it's best to reserve the bed solely for sleeping.

TV show sparks renewed interest in show choir

Students who love to sing and perform are discovering the benefits of choir and chorus programs at school after a popular television show has proven inspirational.

Viewers really haven't been treated to a show about performing students since "Fame" aired for five seasons, beginning in 1982. Since "Glee" debuted in September of 2009, it has revitalized interest in show choirs and become an influential part of pop culture.

For those unfamiliar with "Glee," the show follows the story of high schoolers who team up and perform in a successful show choir group called "New Directions." Revisiting the stereotypes that made "Brat Pack" movies like "The Breakfast Club" popular in the 1980s, the television show pits the personalities of jocks, drama queens, eccentrics, cheerleaders, and other high school staples against one another. Although an integral part of the show is the musical numbers the students perform, the songs are interwoven into the core theme of each episode, and help tell the stories of the students and teachers facing difficult issues – from bullying to intolerance to teenage pregnancy.

"Glee" has quickly become the "90210" for the current generation of high school viewers, but its appeal goes beyond hot-button issues and risque subject matter. Many of the show's avid fans tune in each week for the music and to see the talented cast put its spin on songs of today and yesteryear. "Glee" has even helped spark renewed interest in performance arts programs in schools across the country.

High school vocal directors across the country have reported increased interest and participation in show choirs. In a report in The Daily Iowan, West High music director Ryan Person noted an upsurge in choir participa-

Awareness of school violence keeps students safe

As students prepare to head back to school, thoughts of school violence generally do not top their list of concerns.

On a whole, incidences of school violence are down. In the 1992-1993 school year, the The National School Safety Center's Report on School Associated Violent Deaths indicates that 270 violent deaths occurred in U.S. schools. However, a mere seven years later, during the 1999-2000 school year, that number was reduced by one-quarter. In recent years schools have increased safety measures and it is estimated that the number of school violence incidents today are even less.

Even still, school violence, including shootings on campus, are a very-real occurrence across the country. While massacres such as Columbine in 1999 or Virginia Tech in 2007 are a rarity, smaller-scale violent acts occur a few times every year (see sidebar).

It is the responsibility of school administrators and parents to be diligent in preventing violence in schools. Many feel that schools need to re-evaluate their safety needs to provide a more secure environment for students. Here are some measures that are taking place.

- * Increased use of metal detectors at school entrances.

- * Increased presence of security guards.

- * Guest check-in at the main office.

- * Locked entrance doors that must be unlocked by an administrator should a visitor want to enter during school hours.

- * Increased use of security cameras in and around the school.

- * Alert systems that call home or a mobile phone in the event of an emergency.

- * PA systems that alert to an emergency.

- * E-mail alert systems that indicate an emergency.

- * Emergency procedures in place, apart from fire drills.

- * Stricter punishments for violent students.

- * Open-door policies for students who may have information on potentially violent peers.

If anyone is suspected of violent behavior or seems predisposed by bragging about acts of violence, fascination with violent movies or video games, or indicating possession of a weapon, he or she should be reported immediately to an adult.

Protecting kids from cyber bullies

Whether it's e-mail or schoolwork or just having fun, most kids spend time online almost every day.

While the internet is a great place for kids to find information, share ideas and to meet new people, parents should talk to their children about how to keep safe online because kids who talk to their parents about internet safety are six times less likely to meet an internet stranger in person.

One threat that kids can encounter involves cyber bullying. It may start out as harmless joking, but this form of bullying can escalate into insults, rumors and serious harassment.

Cyber bullies use web technology to insult, intimidate, extort and embarrass other web users. One form of online embarrassment involves posting someone's private message to a public site, such as MySpace or Facebook, both of which are popular amongst teens.

Harassment can also take the form of physical threats. If you child receives threats to person or property, experts at the Internet Keep Safe Coalition say that the situation should be reported to the police.

If the bullying involves an adult harassing a minor child, it may be an attempt by a predator to intimidate a child and should be reported to both the police and to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children's Cyber Tipline, which can be contacted at www.cybertipline.org

If the bully is a fellow student, you can contact the school about its policy for intervention, but all harassment should be reported to the service provider of the bully. A detailed tutorial at www.ikeepSAFE.org shows parents how to report cyber bullying.

Teach kids not to respond to insulting or defaming messages. A common tactic among bullies is to incite the victim and then post compromising responses, further abusing the victim by labeling him/her as unstable or violent.

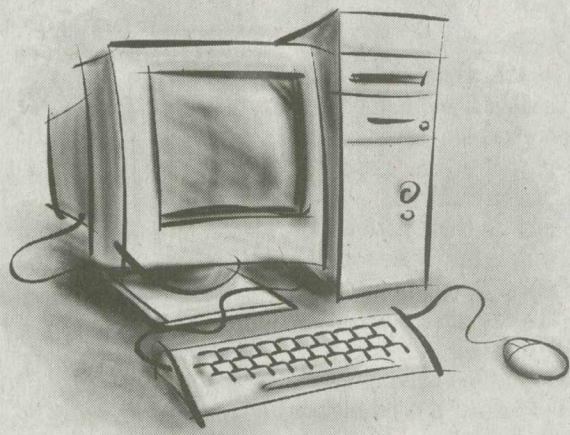

Surprisingly, cyber bullies tend to be smart kids from affluent families with incomes greater than $75,000.

In many cases, they are kids who have found a way to feel in control online, when they may not have a physical advantage in the real world.

Many children do not report cyber bullying because they are afraid that their internet privileges will be taken away. If your child tells you about bullying or harassment, remain calm and thank your child for telling you, then take the proper action by reporting the situation to the proper authorities.

For more information on how to handle cyber bullies and for more tips for parents, visit www.ikeepSAFE.org

Clean hands save lives

Washing hands isn't simply a method of cleaning up before sitting down to dinner. Frequent hand-washing is the single most effective way to prevent illness.

Proper hand-washing has proven effective against the spread of 99 percent of germs that travel via droplets - and that includes the flu virus. The fact of the matter is that dirty hands have the potential to be deadly, especially if they are the carriers of hazardous germs.

It's impossible to avoid germs. Simply going about daily activities exposes a person to thousands of germs. Shopping in a store, going to school or even spending time around the house can spread germs. When a person touches his or her eyes, mouth or nose with hands that are harboring viruses or bacteria, illnesses can easily take root. Germs can also be spread via touch.

Hands TO S-8

size and add low-fat or skim milk for a satisfying snack that most kids can get for themselves.

Not all granola bars are created equal. Choose whole grain granola bars that are low in fat and sugar - take a look at the food label and choose the ones that contain less than 1g of saturated fat per serving and are no more than 35% sugar by weight. Make sure there's at least 5 grams of protein.

Shop your local health store for pre-packaged snacks that are high in fiber and low in fat, sugar and calories.

For more information and recipes, visit the American Heart Association at www.heart.org/healthierkids.

MORE TIPS:

Back to school lunchbox strategies:

- Get lunch ready right after dinner when you're in the kitchen or the night before.
- Pack leftover dinners in lunch-size containers.

- Keep dressings on the side to prevent soggy lunches.
- Freeze healthy drinks to keep your lunch cool.

- Rinse and pack fruit & veggies in snack bags on Sunday night, so they're ready to go all week long.
- If you're buying convenience lunches or snacks, look for those with fewer than 100 calories and the least amount of sugar, saturated fat, trans fat and sodium.

- Kids eat more fruit when it's already cut up. Try oranges and Ginger Gold or Cortland apples since they're slow to brown.

Watch your portions:

Size matters. Portion size has a lot to do with why our kids are gaining weight. Because there's too much of everything on their plates, our kids are getting far more calories than they need daily. To start "Operation Portion Control," you need to know how big a portion size really is. You may be surprised to learn these are serving sizes:

- 1 slice of bread
- ½ cup rice or pasta (cooked)
- 1 small piece of fruit (super-large apples are 2+ servings)
- 1 wedge of melon
- 1/2 cup fruit juice
- 1 cup milk or yogurt
- 2 oz. cheese (about the size of a domino)
- 2-3 oz. meat, poultry or fish (this is about the size of a deck of cards)

Most servings are well over the standard portion size, so we're all getting extra calories we don't need. But with a little effort, we can take control. Cutting down the helpings will cut down the waistlines.

Back to School!

Alleviating first-day-of-school jitters

The first day of school can create butterflies in the stomachs of parents and children. However, following a few tips can alleviate feelings of nervousness.

August and September are prime months for the return to school. Whether this is a child's first time entering the classroom or he or she has done the back-to-school thing multiple times, it's not uncommon for feelings of anxiety to arise.

There are expectations and unknowns with each and every school year for both the students and their parents. Pivotal years, such as kindergarten, 6th grade for middle-schoolers, freshman year of high school, or the start of college can create added levels of jitters because these years mark entry to a new school or new routine. But keeping a few pointers in mind can alleviate some of the fears.

* Keep a routine. It is important for parents and students to get back into the school swing of things a few weeks prior to the first day of school. Start setting alarm clocks for the hour at which kids will have to awaken, and get them in the habit of rising from bed and starting the day. Try to schedule something to do each day that will be the inspiration for getting moving, such as school supply shopping. Take the carpool route to school, or find out where the school bus stop may be. These practice sessions will enable the family to decide how much time is needed to get ready in the morning and make changes accordingly.

* Mention school frequently. Begin talking about school and what is necessary to prepare. Be sure to talk about the more enjoyable aspects of school, such as seeing friends, participating in extracurricular activities and even the change of scenery school provides. Mention the things your child may expect. Hearing about school frequently can reduce feelings of anxiety.

* Visit the school. If this is the student's first time entering this school, you can take advantage of orientation days for new students or schedule an individual visit to the school. A tour and a meeting with the principal will also assuage some fears of the unknown. This can also calm any apprehension parents may have, because they, too, will know the layout of the school, its policies, and who will be watching over their children.

* Don't be nervous. Children often look to their parents for guidelines on how to behave. A parent who is overly nervous or sad about the first day of school could make their kids nervous, too. Put on a brave face and keep any anxiety hidden until kids have left for school.

* Be prepared. Gather supplies, practice the driving route, lay out clothes, make lunch the night before, get a good night's rest, and set the alarm clock. Knowing all of the controllable factors are handled can ease the mind of parents and students.

* Stay positive. Always keep conversations about school geared toward the positive. If children mention things that frighten them, calm those fears and show the upside to attending school. Provide examples of your own school experiences and how everything turned out for the best.

The first day of school can be a time of uncertainty for students and parents. Adults are facing a new stage in their lives, and children are awaiting a classroom of new faces and requirements. Preparing for the first day can alleviate some of the anxiety about heading off to school for a new year.

Hands From S-7

There are many times when hands should be washed.

Before ...

* preparing food

* eating food

* inserting or removing contact lenses

* treating someone who is sick or injured

* giving or taking medicine

After ...

* changing a diaper

* touching an animal, pet toys, etc.

* using the bathroom

* using public transportation

* preparing food, especially raw meats and poultry

* handling garbage or soiled items

* touching a sick or injured person

* blowing your nose or sneezing

Proper Hand-Washing Techniques

There is a right way to wash hands. Follow this procedure, courtesy of The Mayo Clinic.

1. Turn on the water to desired temperature (cold or hot water is equally effective).

2. Wet hands under running water.

3. Apply soap and lather for 20 seconds or more, paying careful attention to all areas of the hands, including the backs of the hands.

4. Rinse well.

5. Dry hands on a towel or with an air dryer. Use a towel to close the faucet. Many germs live on wet faucet handles, and a person can contaminate him or herself again.

Keep in mind that antibacterial soap is no more effective at killing germs than regular soap. In fact, antibacterial products – when overused – actually may kill off good bacteria or cause certain bacteria to become resistant. This will make it harder to kill these germs in the future.

School can prove a pain in the back

As millions of children head off to school this year, there is something most of them will be toting along: a backpack. While the empty backpacks that accompany students back to class may not be much of an inconvenience, once they are filled with textbooks and the other trappings of school, they can become a burden and a health hazard.

When worn properly backpacks can be an important school tool. However, too often children do not wear a backpack in the appropriate manner and open themselves up to a number of injuries.

Backpacks are designed to be worn – as the name implies – on the back. That means both shoulder straps should fit comfortably and the bulk of the bag lie evenly across the back. The back and abdominal muscles of the body are some of the strongest, and when the backpack is positioned correctly, these muscles can safely carry reasonable amounts of weight from books. Most experts agree that a student should carry no more than 10 to 15 percent of his or her body weight in a backpack. Therefore a 60 pound child should carry no more than 6 to 9 pounds of books and supplies.

But many students do not wear their backpacks on their backs and carry too much weight. They toss the bag over one shoulder, which causes a disproportionate amount of weight on one side of the body. This can cause a child to bend over or walk differently to accommodate the weight. Over time this poor posture and the general weight of the bag can cause neck, shoulder and back strain.

Weight and improper wear are not the only hazards of backpacks. Here are some other points to consider.

* It's important to ensure that the straps are comfortable and wide enough to distribute weight. Tight, narrow straps can dig into a child's shoulders and interfere with circulation and nerves. Tingling and numbness are common when backpacks do not fit properly.

* Heavy backpacks can make a person ungainly. Students may have the propensity to fall or lose their balance from the packs. This may be common on staircases or other uneven surfaces.

* Many students do not realize the added girth backpacks contribute. It's easy for others to get knocked over or bumped by a backpack when the wearer doesn't realize how much space he or she is taking up.

* Backpacks strewn about on the floor can prove a tripping hazard.

Choosing an Appropriate Backpack

There are numerous styles of backpacks available today, which makes it possible for all students to find one that will be comfortable and safe. The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends these guidelines when backpack shopping.

* Select a lightweight pack that doesn't add a lot of weight to your child's load. Some materials are heavier than others.

* Look for two wide, padded shoulder straps – straps that are too narrow can dig into shoulders.

* Choose a backpack with a padded back, which not only provides increased comfort, but also protects your child from being poked by sharp edges on objects (pencils, rulers, notebooks, etc.) inside the pack.

* Many packs now come with a waist belt, which helps to distribute the weight more evenly across the body.

* Multiple compartments can also help distribute weight more evenly, so these are good choices.

* While rolling backpacks can take the weight off a child's back, they are often difficult to wheel and especially hard to lift up staircases. Plus, many schools find they are tripping hazards and do not want them in school.

Other Tips to Improve Backpack Safety

Choosing the right backpack is just part of the equation. There are other steps to take to improve health and safety.

* Encourage children to always use both shoulder straps. Slinging a backpack over one shoulder can strain muscles. Wearing a backpack on one shoulder may increase curvature of the spine.

Back to School!!

Hoyt from S-1

or give me more time to study for exams and do my reports."

After high school, Rick attended Boston University, and he graduated with a degree in Special Education in 1993. Dick retired in 1995 as a Lt. Colonel from the Air National Guard, after serving his country for 37 years.

In the spring of 1977, Rick told his father that he wanted to participate in a 5-mile benefit run for a lacrosse player at his school who had been paralyzed in an accident.

"He told me he wanted to do something to show him that life wasn't over," said Dick.

Dick agreed to push Rick in his wheelchair and they finished all five miles, coming in next to last. That night, Rick told his father, "Dad, when I'm running, it feels like I'm not handicapped."

This realization was just the beginning of what would become over 1,000 races completed, including marathons, duathlons and triathlons (6 of them being Ironman competitions). Also adding to their list of achievements, Dick and Rick biked and ran across the U.S. in 1992, completing a full 3,735 miles in 45 days.

Rick was once asked, if he could give his father one thing, what would it be? Rick responded, "The thing I'd most like is for my dad to sit in the chair and I would push him for once."

The 2009 Boston Marathon was officially Team Hoyt's 1000th race.

While the Hoyts have had books written about their efforts before, Todd said this is the first time that Rick has been heavily involved in the writing process.

"When Rick and I met about three years ago it was one of the first things that we discussed," said Todd. "Rick was thrilled at the thought of not only having a book written about him but about participating in the project. He and I tried to get the project started on several occasions but never made much progress. I work full time and Rick is of course non-verbal so the magnitude of the project intimidated me a bit - how to get three hundred pages of text out of Rick, one letter at a time. At one point, however, I lectured myself and said, here I am involved with two men who live by the motto, "Yes You Can" and I am conjuring up excuses of why I can't. I realized my excuses were not acceptable and at that point really put my mind to helping both Rick and I achieve our dream."

Todd said he and Rick decided on the best way to approach getting the book finished.

"Rick and I knew that it would be a challenge for both of us to use his slow and meticulous way of communicating to share his entire life story," said Todd. "It takes Rick about 15 minutes to create a sentence. You can imagine how long a paragraph, a chapter, a book takes. We decided to supplement the book with my writings as well as those who have inspired Rick and conversely been inspired by him. I started reaching out to people from his past and the enthusiasm was overwhelming to participate. We received submissions from about 15 people from Rick's life, none of them who profess to be authors and yet every chapter is awesome. There is a great combination of humor, laughter, sadness and inspiration."

"There are stories in there even I haven't heard," said Dick Hoyt. "I'm looking forward to reading it myself."

The new and dangerous drug is "bath salts"

Thousands of students will be heading back to school, where they will face the pressure of academics, making new friends and avoiding the vices of student life, such as drugs or alcohol. While certain drugs are on parents' radars, new, very dangerous drugs are continually being created.

One new and dangerous drug that has recently come to the forefront is "bath salts." According to the American Association of Poison Control Centers, calls to poison centers pertaining to bath salts rose to 6,138 in 2011 from 304 in 2010.

The drug is not used in the bath but gets its name from its salt-like appearance. It is an inexpensive, synthetic form of speed that is made from mixing different stimulant chemicals. According to authorities and healthcare workers, the drug makes users aggressive and agitated while creating hallucinations that inspire paranoid and violent behavior.

Many people became aware of bath salts in the spring of 2012, when a Miami man who may have been under the influence of bath salts allegedly attacked a homeless man and bit off portions of his face. Other similar cases have been documented.

Top real estate tips for the best first impression

* Scrape and spot-paint problem areas. This might be a temporary fix, but even a touch up is better than peeling paint.

* Add colour by planting
some annuals in the front yard flowerbeds.

* Replace or paint rusty fixtures like the mailbox, railings, house number, and more.

* Tackle pesky weeds on interlock paths and driveway. Use hand sprays for targeted jobs, or larger jugs for a big surface area. More information at www.todaysclearchoice.com

* Install lighting along your walkways and steps, or to spotlight the shape and architecture.

This Week's Sampler: Kearney

Large home full of amenities, drama

Stepping through the columned entry porch and double doors, into the Kearney's 2-story-high foyer, you feel like you've arrived. It's easy to imagine a radiant bride sweeping gracefully down the polished wood stairway that curves up the left side.

Display shelves cap the entry door and the arched opening to the dining room. Another arch leads into the living room, and ten-foot ceilings throughout the main floor add to the feeling of spaciousness.

The rest of this large home, though not quite as dramatic, is equally impressive. In the kitchen and family room, windows fill most of the rear wall, creating bright informal living areas. Skylights in the kitchen and covered patio add to the natural light.

Families who like to cook together will love this kitchen. In addition to counters on three sides, it boasts a large work island with a built-in cooktop, range hood, and pot rack. Other amenities include: a nook, huge walk-in closet, built-in desk, appliance garage, prep sink, double oven and conversation bar. The adjacent utility room is much larger than most, with room for a freezer as well as a second refrigerator.

The master suite is the only bedroom on the main floor. Luxuries here include two walk-in closets, double vanity, private water closet, a large soaking tub and an oversized custom shower. Natural light washes in through glass blocks next to

COLONIAL HOME PLANS - Smooth wooden columns & shuttered windows accent this colonial home plan. Formal & informal gathering spaces wrap around dramatic two-story foyer. Plush master suite on main floor, five large bedrooms on the second level of this saltbox home.
